Smallwood makes announcement

'I'm Like a Boy Out of School'

Joey's Liberals Quit Next Week

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government will resign Monday or Tuesday to make way for Newfoundland's first Progressive Conservative administration since Confederation in 1949.

The 71-year-old premier, his voice slightly hoarse, announced the decision Thursday at a news conference in the cabinet room of the Confederation Building here.

The resignation comes more than two months after the Oct. 28 provincial election which saw the Conservatives under Frank Moores win 21 seats, the Liberals 20 and Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader returned in Labrador West.

Moores told a later news conference he was sorry Smallwood was not planning to meet him to discuss the changeover, but he paid tribute to the premier, who has said he plans to retire from politics Feb. 7.

Moores said forming a new government would not be an easy task and he hoped for co-operation from Liberal members of the 42-seat legislature.

"In the legislature, the Liberal opposition will offer the most sincere co-operation," Smallwood said after reading a prepared statement announcing the resignation.

"There will be an absence of obstructionism, an absence of filibustering."

Smallwood said the cabinet and the caucus had reaffirmed his promise of co-operation at meetings that preceded the announcement.

The government's resignation was brought about by a ruling of the Newfoundland Supreme Court Tuesday.

Two judges turned down a Liberal petition asking that the election of a Conservative in St. Barbe South riding be set aside on grounds that a recount could not be completed because 105 ballots were accidently burned.

The judges were unanimous

State Pollution Probers Seek Hearings in B.C.

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

● Olympia official calls for higher gas exports to U.S. Page 7

OLYMPIA, Wash — A Washington state legislative committee which is studying pollution problems along the international boundary wants to hold hearings in B.C. later this year.

The suggestion was made here Thursday by Thomas Swayze, speaker of the state House of Representatives, who also heads the executive committee of the state legislative council.

Swayze said his committee had taken advantage of the unique opportunity presented by the visit of the NDP caucus from B.C., to hold its first formal hearings in the course of the inquiry which will present its findings to the state legislature early in 1973.

"We hope as part of this study to come up to visit with you, and continue this very interesting dialogue," Swayze told the visitors. "We don't know what will come of the study, perhaps nothing, perhaps very little, or perhaps we'll get some kind of joint control body.

'Too Early'

It's still too early to tell."

The study will deal with a variey of mutual water and air pollution problems ranging from the effects of the Roberts Bank superport and the Cherry Point refinery on nearby areas to the effects of the discharge of raw sewage from Greater Victoria on Olympic peninsula beaches.

The resolution, approved by the House of Representatives in Olympia at its 1971 session, called for the fullest possible co-operation in the study with state departments and agencies, the provincial government in B.C., municipalities on both sides of the border and Canadian and U.S. federal authorities.

Historic

Opposition Leader Dave Barret, who heads the group of NDP house members winding up two days of meetings with state legislators here, described the hearing as an historic occasion. He said he was proud to participate in a formal way in the first joint talks between Washington and B.C. on pollution problems.

He also promised to present a similarly worded resolution to the B.C. Legislature at the earliest possible date, following next Thursday's opening in an effort to have the whole question of co-operation discussed in the house.

Last year, the hearing was

Study Request News To Williston

If the B.C. government received a copy of a Washington state resolution last year asking for the co-operation of the province and its municipalities in a joint pollution study, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston has never seen it.

That's what Willison said Thursday night when asked to comment on the resolution, mentioned earlier in the day in Olympia, Wash., during a hearing of a Washington state legislative committee studying pollution problems.

The resoluion was said to have been forwarded to Premier Bennett's office.

Williston said any communication from the Washington state committee seeking co-operation would normally be forwarded from the premier's office to his department and "to my knowledge, we have had no such request."

Bennett is away on holiday.

Asked to comment on a proposal from the same Washington state committee that joint pollution hearings be held in B.C. later this year, Williston said: "I don't suppose there would be anything wrong with them if they had a purpose."

Regarding the possibility of any effects of Greater Victoria outfalls on Olympic peninsula beaches, he said the province has been closely monitoring the new outfall system and has found "there's nothing to measure."

"How anything could possibly be found on Washington beaches, I haven't a clue," he said.

Noting the hearing took place while NDP members were present, Williston said, "It sounds like they've been guided in this statement."

Benson Aide, Statistics Differ

● Benson says living-cost rise nothing to worry about, Page 9

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson was ready to paint a rosy picture of Canada's economic outlook Thursday. Statistics Canada wasn't.

In a speech to the Truck Loggers' Association convention, Pat Mahoney said the economy made strong progress in 1971 despite a faltering U.S. economy and will get a dramatic boost this year as the U.S. economy recovers.

One of the economic indicators he mentioned was the index of industrial production — which measures the output of the manufacturing and mining industries and power utilities.

The industrial production index, he said, showed significant gains in October.

Statistics Canada, however, reported earlier Thursday that the index declined to 181.1 in November from 181.7 in October. The index was adjusted to remove normal seasonal variations and reflect the real trend in industrial production.

"The manufacturing industries have been doing particularly well," Mahoney said.

Mahoney

"Strong gains have been recorded in recent months, notably in durables manufacturing production such as wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment," Mahoney said.

Statistics Canada reported that the biggest November declines in manufacturing production were in those industries — wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment.

Mahoney also expressed concern at what he termed "the possibility of a renewed inflation."

Statistics Canada reported earlier Thursday that the consumer price index had recorded its largest November-to-December jump in a decade and consumer prices now are 36.3 per cent above 1961 levels.

Mahoney, apparently referring to possible large wage-increase requests, warned the association that "if big cost increases are granted Canada's capacity to export and stay competitive will be threatened."

He made no specific appeal for companies to hold prices down.

In beginning his review of the economic outlook, he noted that "as a politician on the government side you would hardly expect me to say anything other than that the economy is doing well."

U.S. Halts Hash Haul

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. customs commission Friday reported the seizure of 1,330 pounds of hashish worth almost $2 million — largest shipment in its history — at Portland, Ore.

A commission spokesman said a 1971 model Volkswagen pickup had been shipped from Los Angeles to Karachi, Pakistan, last June, and had been en route to Vancouver, B.C. by way of the United States, when it was seized. The hashish was to be sold eventually in the U.S.

Police Fire On Blacks In Rhodesia

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian police opened fire on African workers at a mine about 200 miles southwest of Salisbury Wednesday night, killing one African and wounding nine others.

The government Thursday accused African nationalists of using intimidation tactics in an attempt to impress visiting members of a special commission charged with judging whether Rhodesia's population approves terms of a settlement with Britain on Rhodesian independence.

Warmth-Born Tornado Kills Four in Trailers

FT. RUCKER, Ala. (UPI) — A tornado spawned in spring-like weather ripped through this army base and two nearby trailer parks Thursday, killing four persons and injuring about 80 others.

At least 50 trailers were destroyed and 50 others were heavily damaged. Cars, boats, power lines and trees were stacked in piles of rubble. About 100 families were homeless.

Dozens of other tornadoes were spotted through the southern United States.

Gov. George Wallace returned to Alabama from Florida, where he entered the Democratic presidential primary, and toured the Ft. Rucker area. "It is tragic to see the destruction and to see so many lives lost and people injured," he said. "However, after seeing the destruction, I don't see what kept it from being many more."

Several army helicopters, each worth half a million dollars, were destroyed at Ft. Rucker and eight others were damaged. Two hangars were destroyed.

Other less severe twisters swept into Georgia from Alabama, touching down in an area bounded by Bainbridge in southwest Georgia, Juniper in the north and Dublin in the east.

Epitaph Collector Lacks Epitaph

He Left No Stone...

OTTAWA (CP) — Wilson Arthur Stewart, who spent the last 18 years of his life crossing the country recording tombstone epitaphs, has to wait for one of his own.

His death Oct. 10 in the National Defence Medical Centre here went almost unnoticed. Then aged 53, he had a long way to go in his efforts to record the inscriptions on each of Canada's 25 million grave markers. Only about 2 per cent were preserved in his files.

He was founder and sole administrator of the Limestone Cemetery and Genealogical Society, and just before his death he was planning a national convention of genealogists and graveyard enthusiasts.

Stewart's place of birth is not contained in his file kept by the department of veterans' affairs. During his years of headstone study he lived in Kingston, Ont., Edmonton and Ottawa.

He is buried in the soldiers' plot at Ottawa's Beechwood Cemetery, where the uniform headstones are ordered in batches of 50. Until his row is filled during the next few months, Stewart's own resting spot will go unmarked.

His only epitaph will be name, age and former rank of gunner in the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Italians Bottled Up

Nature Springs Rude Surprise

ROME (UPI)—Italians by the millions scorn local water supplies and turn to the expensive bottled variety because they believe it is healthy, or they did, until this week.

A television consumer report program sent sample bottles of one of the most popular mineral waters in the Rome region to the city health department laboratory for analysis of the health-promoting minerals the water supposedly contained.

The laboratory reported that among the many chemicals in the gaseous water were traces of ammonia and nitrates—enough to make the water unsafe for drinking. The health department warned against buying it.

The Rome investigation followed one by carabinieri (national police) who said four mineral springs near Genoa, Rome and Caserta, produced undrinkable water. They confiscated 100,000 bottles of the suspected water.

Anderson Denies Tanker Run 'Irrevocable'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Pollution battler David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Thursday that any belief an "irrevocable" decision has been made to bring Alaskan oil to Washington state refineries through Juan de Fuca Strait is "false, misleading and irresponsible."

In a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., Anderson said Washington state legislators were "naive and gullible" if they thought such a decision can be made, while the Alaska oil issue was still subject to court battles in the U.S. capital.

Reports that establishment of the oil-tanker route from Alaska to Washington state refineries via the Strait of Juan de Fuca was a fait accompli originated in Olympia, Wash. Wednesday with Republican Representative Harold Wolf.

Wolf told a joint press conference of state legislators and visiting New Democratic Party MLA's from B.C. that a new oil refinery at Cherry Point near Bellingham was in operation as of this week.

He also disclosed that Atlantic Richfield, which operates the refinery, is building three new supertankers to transport oil from Alaska to

Tower Men Return In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Control tower technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports, who walked off their jobs Thursday; returned to work at 1 a.m. today after a 24-hour study session.

Their colleagues who followed by walking out Thursday across Canada to Vancouver, are still in study sessions, however. But Pat Bay officials said late Thursday all flights were operating normally and the three technicians were on the job.

told, a copy of the Washington resolution seeking co-operation of the province and B.C. municipalities in the proposed study, was sent to Premier Bennett. But state officials said here Thursday so far there has been no reply from the premier's office.

Sewage Word

In Olympia, Representative Paul Conners, one of the sponsors of the resolution, told the hearing that while driving to his Port Angeles home, he tuned his car radio to a Victoria station where the topic of discussion was sewage disposal.

In the debate over whether there should be primary treatment, Conner said, it appeared proponents of simply lengthening existing outfalls for discharge of raw sewage, were in the majority.

"They said tidal currents would carry the sewage away from Victoria beaches and it occurred to me just 17 miles away, that meant it might be coming this way," the state legislator said.

"In the Great Lakes, legislators on both sides of the border waited until it was too late before they tried a joint attack on regional water pollution problems. Here we can start a dialogue now which hopefully will take us along the road to early mutual consideration of such problems."

Representative James Costanti said in his area there are potentially serious air and water pollution problems both from the Roberts Bank superport and the Atlantic-Richfield oil refinery near Bellingham.

"This is the right time to get started," he told the hearing, "and I feel sure that we can arrive at solutions which will benefit both our countries."

Leo Nimsick, NDP MLA for Kootenay, said he felt that joint action on pollution problems was long overdue. He said B.C. and Washington authorities should meet frequently to seek solutions to problems before they got out of hand.

Anderson Denies Oil Route Decided

Washington through B.C. waters.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, who headed the NDP group in Olympia, said after Wolf's disclosure that he was appalled to find that Washington state legislators regarded the tanker route decision as "irrevocable."

Anderson said he was enraged that U.S. elected representatives would actually believe the decision has been made, and that they would regard the building of the supertankers as proof for that assumption.

"If what they say were really true, it would smack of corruption; it would smack of gutlessness on the part of the politicians. What really makes me furious is that the U.S. politicians seem to succomb to the inevitability of the situation."

To accept these speculations as truth, Anderson said, would mean that a big company could force a decision simply by making a substantial investment, thus "outfoxing and bypassing" the legislative powers.

"The fact is they can't do it; the U.S. constitution won't let them; if they would do it anyway, and if the politicians would let them they don't deserve to represent the people."

If a company made an investment anticipating certain government decisions, he said, "that's their prerogative, and if the government doesn't comply with their wishes, that's tough.

"If the Alaska pipeline isn't approved, and 800 miles of pipe will rust up there, that's tough.

"If the oil won't be transported by supertankers, that's tough, but I don't think we should allow ourselves to be blackmailed by this sort of investment speculation."

Anderson pointed out that the construction of three tankers doesn't mean they will have to be used on the proposed Alaska-Washington route.

"There are thousands of tankers, so why not three more?"

Anderson is in Washington, D.C., to attend a hearing today at which he and the Canadian Wildlife Association are seeking a ruling that would permit them to join the lawsuit launched by a number of U.S. environmental groups against the proposed Alaska oil pipeline.

The pipeline would be part of the oil-tanker route proposal. The plan is for crude oil to be transported via pipeline from Alaska's North Slope to the Southern port of Valdez. From there it is to be shipped to Washington refineries in supertankers.

Today's hearing is before a U.S. District Court Judge. If he rejects Anderson's request, Anderson plans to take it before a U.S. Appeals Court.

Meanwhile, Victoria MP David Groos announced he is pressing for establishment of an international commission that would rigidly control shipping along the west coast.

His thoughts on the matter are contained in a letter to Prime Minister Trudeau.

Such an international commission on the west coast should control shipping from Alaska to California, Groos believes.

The power would include the seizure and destruction of any ships obviously endangering either the Canadian or American coast.

Groos says the British now have this type of authority where their coastal waters are concerned.

B.C. Recreation Minister Kenneth Kiernan said in a Victoria interview that the tankers would obviously be using international waters and neither B.C. nor Canada could stop them because of this.

If a tanker route is to be followed, the most important question now is the quality of the vessels, the ability of the crews and the establishment of proper navigational aids, he said.

In this regard, he also favors the formation of a joint council commission. Shipping would be under the strict control of the country whose shores it is passing.

Smallwood Resigns Next Week in their decision that the Tory candidate should be declared the winner.

The premier had said the government had the right to remain in office until the St. Barbe South dispute was settled.

He said he would have resigned the government immediately after Tuesday's ruling, but "I had been approached by two different members of the House of Assembly, not Liberals, expressing their dissatisfaction with the Conservative party and their desire to support the Liberal party."

"I considered that in the circumstances it was right and proper for me to take a few hours to consider the matter.

"I have given much thought and made my decision."

Smallwood refused to identify the two members and also declined to say whether one was Burgess.

There had been widespread speculation here that Burgess, who said Nov. 10 he would support the Tories was considering a switch to the Liberals.

"I have had a personal conversation with His Honor the lieutenant-governor and have informed him that it is my intention to tender to him my resignation as his chief minister, which of course carries with it the resignation of the cabinet as a whole," Smallwood said.

"I propose to tender my resignation to the governor on Monday or Tuesday of next week.

"From my heart I thank the people of Newfoundland and Labrador for the opportunity they have given me to serve our province.

"The people have been most generous to me and I shall always be deeply grateful to them."

Moores said it was likely there would be a general election this year, "but at this moment we are more interested in drawing up plans for giving good government rather than thinking about an election."

The legislature would be called into a brief session within two weeks for minor legislation, he said, including the removal of the 7-per-cent sales tax from children's clothing.

A longer session likely will open in mid-March to accommodate heavier legislation, and a "mini-budget" brought down to take the government past the end of the fiscal year, March 31.

Moores said a more comprehensive budget would be introduced later in the spring.

A 12- or 14-man cabinet would be appointed during the weekend.

"We are not going to have miracles overnight, but we will get on with it and hopefully Newfoundland will be a better place because of it."

"The strain is gone," Smallwood said with a grin when asked how he felt about getting out of politics.

"I'm like a boy out of school — never been so happy."

He said he would not accept a call to the Senate or other high posts.

In 'Do-Your-Thing' Society

Psychopath Hard To Spot

OTTAWA (CP) Society does not yet have the knowledge to deal with the "unbelievable social damage" caused by psychopaths, a Vancouver psychology professor said Thursday.

Moreover, said Dr. Robert Hare, an experimental psychologist from the University of British Columbia, the problem is getting even worse because psychopaths are becoming more difficult to recognize in the modern "do-your-own-thing" environment.

He told a seminar sponsored by the Canadian Science Writers' Association that characteristics of psychopaths include impulsiveness, agressiveness, lack of remorse for anti-social behavior, inability to form warm relationships, little regard for consequences, complete selfishness.

They differ from persons whose anti-social behavior stems from anxieties or neuroses, or from those whose deviant behavior pattern actually corresponds to that of a group with standards differing form the norm, such as a criminal subculture.

But not enough research has been done, he said, to be sure what the anti-social behavior does stem from, or how it can be curbed.

Psychopaths neither learned from nor were deterred by prison, and those sent to mental hospitals were usually dismissed as soon as possible because they often created havoc. Most therapists were pessimistic about even attempting to treat them.

And most psychopaths do not even get to prison or hospital, many of them being clever and charming enough to get away with their behavioral pattern, he said.

They were becoming more camouflaged in society because it has become more popular to behave in a self-centred way, with a lot of people believing this is the only way to survive.

While such behavior did not always in itself cause other people mental agony or social damage, the increase in its incidence gave the true psychopath more opportunity to blend with his environment.

While most psychopaths appeared to have average or above-average intelligence, there was some evidence to show that their minds were not as fully aroused as those of average people, which could lead to a hunger for exciting and unusual experiences.

The negative features of a psychopath were often superficially outweighed by charm, glibness, wittiness and a generally fascinating personality.

But persons knowing the psychopath well recognize him as a "rotten bastard," interesting at moments but in the long run a complete disaster for those connected with him.

A high proportion of psychopaths were found among charlatans of all sorts, such as medical quacks, crooked lawyers, police and stock promoters, members of motorcycle gangs, pimps and loan-sharks, some camp followers of radical movements and fanatical sects, and persons involved in shady business practices.

The three-day conference, which began today, is designed to bring more than 50 science writers from across Canada into contact with medical and scientific experts.

Alcohol and Diabetics

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you explain the effects of alcohol or alcoholic beverages on a diabetic, other than the calorie intake? — L. V.

The answers to your question get a bit complicated, but they are important. The diabetes patient must, of course, limit the total number of calories and carbohydrates consumed. If he consumes more than his physical activity, plus medication, can handle, he's going to be in trouble, sooner or later.

Therefore, whatever calories he consumes in the form of alcohol means he must do without a corresponding amount of substantial nourishment.

But there are other, and not always predictable, effects. Alcohol can increase the glycogen (starch) reserve stored in the liver. But it also can reduce it — and that jeopardizes the "emergency supply" of energy on which one may have to call.

Beyond that, the consequences depend a good deal on how the person reacts to alcohol, and, of course, how much he drinks. "A few drinks" can often delay a meal, or blunt the appitite so that insufficient food is eaten. If the drinks cause vomiting or diarrhea, that can play havoc with the water-mineral balance of the body, and precipitate acidosis in a diabetic.

And if a diabetic drinks to the point of stupor, it is obvious that the necessary routine can be thrown out of kilter drastically.

To sum up, any but the most casual use of alcohol is risky for a diabetic, the danger varying according to the individual. The diabetic should also remember that mixed drinks may contain some sugar, which also must be avoided.

If a diabetic — most but not necessarily all diabetics — can reliably stick to no more than an occasional highball, it usually will be tolerated. The danger often is when one finds that the occasional drink does no harm, there's the temptation to think that two won't either. Or three.

Because some diabetics are more "brittle" than others, I don't like to voice approval even for the single, occasional drink, unless the patient first clears the question with his doctor.

'Don't Worry'

Wrong House Wrecked

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When Dorothy Irwin, temporarily living in an apartment, got the word from a friend that a bulldozer had arrived at her house, she hurried the two miles to it.

"It couldn't have been more than 30 minutes . . . but the house was already torn down," she said.

The man with the bulldozer, she said, explained he was sent out to tear down a Raven Street house Wednesday under an earthquake demolition program.

"This address is 13603 Eldridge Avenue," Mrs. Irwin said. She said her $24,000 house had received perhaps $5,000 damage in the Feb. 9 earthquake but was repairable.

The bulldozer man "told me not to worry about it, that his insurance would cover the damage," she said.

Blood Donor Quota: 425

Red Cross officials said Thursday that the minimum number of donors at clinics to be held next week has been set at 425.

Impostor Called Genius Who May Beat A-Bomb

SAN DIEGO, Calif. (UPI)—The president of a research firm which made Claudio Sabatino Donatelli a vice-president, only to discover his academic credentials were forged, called him a "genius" Thursday and said his theories might lead to ways of neutralizing atomic warheads.

Donatelli was arrested after an FBI check of his credentials requested by Environmental Control Management Corp., which was submitting his idea to the government to try to get a federal grant.

'Next 72 Hours Decide Fate'

Key Battle in Laos

SAIGON (UPI) — Communist forces under cover of Soviet-made artillery have stripped most of the defences from the Cia Meo guerrilla base at Long Cheng, a Laotian government spokesman said Thursday. Fighting in the next 72 hours will determine its fate, he said.

(A Pathet Lao radio report monitored in Tokyo said Thursday Long Cheng, 80 miles northeast of Vientiane, had fallen to communist forces which had annihilated a large number of government forces. U.S. sources denied the claim.

Acting defence minister Sisouk Na Champassak has told UPI that the fall of the base — headquarters for Gen. Van Pao's Meo guerrillas — could pave the way for Communist infiltration into Vientiane.

Government defenders Wednesday lost three positions in the northwest to northeast eight-mile ridge of Long Cheng. On Tuesday they lost another position on the east side.

Military sources in Saigon said, meanwhile, that heavy U.S. air raids against North Vietnam last month were a military failure and did nothing to hamper communist traffic down the Ho Chi Minh Trail complex in Laos.

The sources citing deports from pilots of U.S. planes and helicopters on patrols over Laos and South Vietnam, said traffic "has remained steady" from the beginning of the trail at mountain passes in North Vietnam to the end at the Cambodia-Laos-South Vietnam border.

'Adventures' Help Train U.K. Soldiers

LONDON (CP) — The British army's duties in Northern Ireland have stretched the organization's over-all strength to some extent but there is no question of its being under excessive strain, a military spokesman here says.

Thus the army has been able to carry on in numerous fields outside Ireland, ranging from NATO (Britain has 50,000 men in continental Western Europe) to what are termed "adventure training" missions in various parts of the world.

One such mission called for the crossing of the Darien Gap, a jungle region of Panama previously considered impassable to the most rugged varieties of motorized groups. That was part of a British trans-America expedition, running from Alaska in the north to Cape Horn in the south.

Under the plans drawn up for the mission, the army section of the undertaking is to leave Britain by air for Panama today.

Another expedition involving British army participation provided for a trip to Nepal and work in the high Himalayas, including a search for such unusual insects as the tiny jumping spider which will prove a significant addition to a major museum collection in Britain.

The army spokesman in London said the main purpose of these and similar trips elsewhere by the comparatively small groups of adventure-bound soldiers is the development of iniative and self-reliance that only life under extreme conditions can promote.

Indian Students' Lag Produces Few Grads

KELOWNA (CP) — Indian children are so far behind other children in B.C. when they reach Grade 8 that few complete high school and go onto universities, it was charged Wednesday.

Alvin Mackay of Vancouver, executive director of the B.C. Native Teachers' Association, levelled the charges at a meeting of chiefs and council members from the Kootenay-Okanagan and Thompson River districts.

Mackay, who taught in Indian elementary schools for 14 years, supervises a research centre at the University of B.C. which attempts to find weaknesses in education of Indian children and report them to school officials.

There are 37 Indian teachers in B.C., six teaching in Indian elementary schools, the rest in regular schools. The federal Indian affairs department has schools to Grade 7 in a few areas of B.C., but most children attend regular schools.

He said the association is trying to encourage Indian children to be teachers.

Shots Kill Sergeant

BELFAST (AP) — Gunfire from a speeding car killed a part-time soldier Thursday in a Belfast suburb untouched until now by Northern Ireland's sectarian violence, the army said.

An army spokesman said Sgt. Maynard Crawford died when his attackers pumped several shots into the panel truck he was driving in Whiteabbey.

Ousted Ghanaian Accused Of Amassing Fortunes

By ADAM SHAW

ABIDJAN IVORY COAST (UPI) — The army and police seized power from Ghana's Premier Kofi Busia in a bloodless coup in the capital city of Accra Thursday while he was away in London. The rebels accused Busia of economic mismanagement and amassing "huge fortunes" outside the country.

In London, where he was undergoing treatment for an eye ailment, the 58-year-old premier said he was shocked to learn of the coup and denounced as "preposterous" the charges levied against him.

"My heart bled for Ghana, for I know what a tragic setback it would be for the country if the coup were to succeed," Busia said in his first public statement since the coup.

The coup was staged in the West African country just eight days after Mrs. Richard Nixon visited Africa. Busia had played host at the time to the American first lady who told the national assembly, "your assembly seems more fun than ours."

First reports indicated the coup was virtually a carbon copy of the joint army-police uprising that toppled former president Kwame Nkrumah while he was visiting Peking six years ago.

No Cause for Panic

THE CONTROVERSY OVER THE USE of Malta's dockyard and air-base facilities by Great Britain and her NATO partners continues in spite of the fact that Prime Minister Edward Heath appears to feel the issue is settled, at least as far as his government is concerned. The demands of Prime Minister Dom Mintoff are simply unacceptable to Great Britain, and British forces and families are in process of withdrawal from the one-time island fortress.

Whatever the final outcome, Malta's importance as a base, particularly for surface and undersea vessels of war, has been thoroughly examined and evaluated.

Obviously Mr. Heath does not consider it the vital link in the NATO scheme of defence that it was assumed to be to the allied strategy in the Second World War. Subsequent judgment has sometimes suggested that Malta's principal value during its prolonged siege was one of morale, rather than any threat it posed to an enemy.

If that were debatable 25 years ago the case for retention at any price has even less validity today. Malta is a convenience, and nothing more, to the NATO powers. The greatest loss by Mr. Mintoff's grasping tactics is to the loyal workers in the military service establishment built up over the years.

The Economist of London, without lamenting surrender of the Malta facility, does contend that command of the sea is still important to the powers in spite of intercontinental ballistic missiles. The point is scarcely debatable. But the day is past when any nation, not excluding the United States and the Soviet Union with all their vast fleets, can claim with any justification to rule the waves.

The Economist goes on to cite examples of the significant use of sea power in recent years. Despatch of the USS Enterprise to the Indian Ocean to divert the Indian navy and discourage an attack on West Pakistan was one. The Cuba crisis of 1962, the British patrol of Beira since the sanctions against Rhodesia were introduced in 1966, and Egyptian naval action against Israel were others.

It is doubtful if the presence of the Enterprise had the slightest effect on India's decision with respect to West Pakistan. As for the Cuban crisis, it was the vulnerability of the island to air attack rather than sea bombardment which made Nikita Khrushchev change his mind. Nor is there evidence of a compelling nature to show the British blockade of Beira has had any practical part in the Rhodesian negotiations. Certainly the Egyptians proved the efficacy of missile-carrying torpedo-boats against a destroyer, but all of these examples together do no more than emphasize that the navies still provide a useful arm.

They do not by any means support an argument for hanging on to Malta.

In the improbable event of the Soviet Union ever attempting to test NATO strength in the Mediterranean with conventional weapons, the result could be predicted with some confidence. And Malta, no matter who was making use of the bases there, would play no essential part in it.

Valetta is simply a convenience, and Mr. Heath recognizes the fact.

Muddle in the Middle

IT SEEMS UNFORTUNATE that at a time when every available facility is required for the relief of the problem of narcotics addiction that even a small operation like that of Victoria's Bridge House should be in any way curtailed.

Operated by the Pacific Drug Dependency Society at 1354 Pandora, Bridge House had been rented for $300 a month. But when the landlord boosted the cost to $650, says the society's organizer, Bill Ogston, it became impossible to keep the rehabilitation residence in operation.

Mr. Ogston complains that an application for government assistance was made a year ago and that there has been no response.

But information reaching this newspaper to the effect that a grant will be considered, and with excellent prospects of an affirmative answer, will cheer the society and those who have been beneficiaries from its rehabilitation program. If help can be expedited there is a hope that Bridge House may soon function normally again.

There has been some confusion and overlap in the area of on-going grants under the $25,000,000 fund created for the government's program of control of abuse of drugs, alcohol and tobacco. Apparently the situation has been so complicated that there have been delays in consideration of applications for fear of duplication.

Hopefully the B.C. Research Council, which has been commissioned to sort out this muddle, will come up with the requisite answers.

Meanwhile, the country is still waiting for the LeDain Commission recommendations for action on the national problem of narcotics addiction and control.

From every side come discouraging reports of wider abuses of drugs, with evidence of stepped up importations, and still the Ottawa authorities plead that more time is required to determine an effective policy. How much more time? The longer the delay the greater the pressure of this problem, with the increase in cost of control assuming nightmarish proportions.

Restoration of the Bridge House rehabilitation services would be one small success, but in relation to the national need it is of small consequence.

It will be interesting to see if, in the local minicrisis there will be quicker and more effective action than Ottawa has been able to generate with all its experts, committees and commissions, and whether in this problem of grants the muddle in the middle can be corrected expeditiously.

"I'm sure Mr. Benson wouldn't close up your loopholes on purpose, dear."

Ottawa Offbeat

The Habit of Campaigning

By RICHARD JACKSON, Colonist Ottawa Bureau

WOULD you believe that after 10 successive election victories, seven of them in Prince Albert, former Conservative prime minister and still dean of the House of Commons John Diefenbaker is "worried" about winning and holding his riding again, next time around?

The record in the Parliamentary Guide shows that in the last four elections, Dief has come out easy winner by never less than 11,000 votes.

In the old riding of Lake Centre where he ran three times, before switching to Prince Albert, his winning margin was narrower, but still substantial.

But the Old Warrior is wondering if Prince Albert, which has sent him to Parliament seven times in a row, will remain faithful in the next election.

* * *

Odd, isn't it, when The Chief has become almost a national institution, respected if not always loved, even by the "Grits," as he calls the Liberals?

Elder statesman, former prime minister and Conservative leader, by now an unchanging fixture in an ever-changing House of Commons, survivor of 32 years in Parliament come the next election, and a "showpiece" like the Peace Tower, for tourists and visitors who come to stroll the corridors of power.

But even so, he frets, for he knows that winning is seldom easy and never quite sure.

So he goes back to Prince Albert to "main-street," visit the barber shop — "a great place to meet old friends" — and call on newcomers to town, just as if he was the young John Diefenbaker of 32 years ago, making his first campaign rounds in his initial Lake Centre riding.

* * *

To hear him tell it, the wise MP dares never take anything, especially the voters, for granted.

For no matter how much you might have done for them over it-doesn't-matter-how-many-many-years, there is the feeling that they expect you to do more.

After 32 years and 10 elections it no longer is work though, having become a part of every-day living.

The habit of politics can be broken only by defeat.

And if you've never been defeated, you just keep on working at winning, enjoying every minute of it, even if you don't really have to lift a finger.

Like Paul Martin, who, until he was "promoted" to the Senate in 1968, enjoyed the longest parliamentary run stretching back 10 elections to 1935.

He's "safe" now, as some envious MPs might phrase it, for he's there in the Senate until he's 75 and he doesn't have to run for anything.

But he can't break the habit, and just won't stop running.

Like down in Tampa, Florida, not long ago, when he came to the Air Canada departure lounge and found it packed with Canadians.

Made the rounds, introducing himself and shaking every hand. Even the children's.

They didn't all know him when he entered, but they sure did by the time he left — to duck out of the door to introduce himself to a carload of Canadians just pulling up.

* * *

Senator Martin flies home weekends still — not to relax, like any non-politician would do — but to campaign, even if he isn't running for anything any more.

Never fails Saturday morning to station himself at the exit door from some supermarket in one of a number of shopping malls in his old riding of Essex East. Shaking hands, saying hello, "just being there," as he puts it.

Prime Minister Trudeau flew into Windsor (part of Essex East) not long ago, and the staff at Holiday Inn, where there was a reception, had to turn out to greet him.

But it was "Oom Paul," as one of the Inn's bellmen called him, that they lined up to applaud, because Mr. Martin, while now a senator and no longer MP, was still "our man."

Senator Martin seldom enters the Centre Block by the Senate entrance.

Too quiet. No crowds. Nobody to greet and meet.

So he goes in by the main door where the visitors and tourists and the innumerable students line up to await seats in the Commons galleries and their turn in guided tours of the building.

Slowly Senator Martin walks down the line, eye peeled for a familiar face.

Somebody says, "There's Paul Martin," and wham, on go the senator's brakes. He stops to chat, meets everyone in the group. Asks, "Are you from Windsor?" If they are, he jots down their names and addresses. Goes to the nearest phone and calls his secretary with them, and out go letters that very day to these people informing them, when they get home again, how glad Paul Martin was to meet them.

* * *

The names and addresses go into his files for Christmas cards, birthday greetings, notes on anniversaries, births, deaths, graduations, in fact, any family event.

He has the biggest name and address file on Parliament Hill, all updated and annotated, and he still "works" it, still running, although there is nothing now to run for.

Habit. Life-style of years. Like Dief. Always campaigning.

Washington Calling

Test of Time Needed

By MARQUIS CHILDS

WHAT can be scored for the meeting between Japan and the United States will not be known until well into the future. But, given the bitterness souring the relationship between Tokyo and Washington only two months ago, it can be judged at least a partial success.

The very fact that Prime Minister Eisaku Sato came with a retinue of 28, including three cabinet members, was a triumph of sorts. This made Sato a member of the summit club, and by all accounts he was pleased and flattered by the Nixon welcome. He will retire when the Okinawa reversion treaty is final, and the meeting was, therefore, a capstone to a career of leadership in the rebirth of Japan.

* * *

No matter how resolute the promises the president gave the prime minister, the Japanese will wait with ill-concealed anxiety to see what transpires in Peking beginning Feb. 21. They hope the president will achieve a halfway house between the normalization of diplomatic relations and the development of trade, travel and cultural exchanges.

Such a halfway house would serve the Japanese as a useful model for their own beginning relations with Peking. It would quiet the clamor of the left parties and a faction within Sato's Liberal Democrats pushing to get on with it and let Taiwan go hang. More important, it would open the way for Japanese industrialists, with the backing of large government loans, to revive the flourishing prewar trade with mainland China.

* * *

Whether Peking will settle with the United States, to say nothing of Japan, for a convenient halfway house raises a very large order of doubt. The Nixon-Sato summit has helped to make clear that the president is taking one of the greatest gambles in American diplomatic history. In a death-defying act he has put his head in the dragon's mouth. If he emerges unscathed he can take a well-deserved bow before the whole world.

With the Red China visit drawing nearer and even as an advance party works on the all-important television arrangements, the Peking radio intensifies its attacks: America is a wicked imperialist power. America is riddled by corruption and contradictions in the midst of a recession with the impoverished many and the affluent few. America is decadent, finished.

* * *

This fustian is discounted as meant only for the Communist powers that China woos. The conviction anchoring all the plans for the visit is that Peking, given the massive Soviet threat, needs the Nixon visit at least as much as does the president for his own special reasons.

If the Japanese have their hopes they also have their fears, and it is hardly necessary to add that those fears were not entirely allayed during the two days in San Clemente. The nightmare that has haunted them since the Peking announcement takes the following form. The president is persuaded by Chou En-lai and Mao Tse-tung to make a deal meaning the relatively speedy opening of diplomatic relations between Peking and Washington. Taiwan and Chiang Kai-shek are abandoned.

* * *

In this scenario of fear and suspicion Japan would be left adrift. The ties with Taiwan could not be abruptly severed if only because of the sizable Japanese investment on that island. And Peking would be in a position so strong as to make bargaining all but impossible with the only alternative a humiliating kowtow.

That this is inconceivable, as the Americans said again and again during the meeting, makes no difference. The visceral fear grows out of the shock that a great and good friend, a protector, pulled the rug out without a word of warning. Only time can erase this trauma.

Another intangible yet nevertheless real barrier has worked against the knitting together of ties once taken for granted. That is the American failure to realize and understand Japan's foreignness — the subtlety of Japanese thinking, the ceremonial way of life of an island people who have built up formidable psychological defences against the outside world. For all the superficial resemblance, the passion for golf and baseball, they are utterly different people.

* * *

That is particularly true of men of the older generation — Sato and his foreign minister, Takeo Fukuda, who is likely to be his successor. This encounter between East and West will not be resolved by a football play or a golf game. It calls for the kind of hard intellectual effort that has been in short supply.

Cycle Routes

CITIES all over the world are attempting to find solutions to the problem of efficiently moving great numbers of people within their environs. The line of least resistance which we have followed for many years has proven in net effect to have been the most expensive, in many ways.

Now something which started as a type of fad, bicycle riding, has become somewhat entrenched. This form of transportation, while it will never become the universal solution to the problem, provides excellent exercise for the soft urbanite, reduces parking problems, uses little space, does not pollute, is inexpensive, does not require expensive roadways, and gives the user a sense of satisfaction as refreshing and sensible uses are discovered for little-used muscles.

In view of the large number of bicycles on the roads and the fact that their numbers are likely to continue to increase, it is time for citizens and their elected representatives to consider, then act on, providing safe, well planned cycle routes in Victoria and its environs. These could consist of certain streets set aside as cycle routes, with limited local vehicle traffic. Special cycle paths could be built. This might be achieved with assistance from a higher level of government to provide winter employment. Certain lanes of existing streets could be set aside for the cyclist. If the facilities are provided, increasing numbers will use them.

This is not a solution for urban traffic problems, but the bicycle could considerably alleviate the problem in a city the size of Victoria.

PETER MUNK.

Big Gulp

At this time of year when our world is covered in snow and slush, I remember with some nostalgia the song "Where have all the flowers gone, long time passing." But now, in the winter of my taxpayer's discontent, the words have soured somewhat to "Where have all the taxes gone, long time passing." Well, at least some, I know, have gone to the $80,000 settlement generously bestowed by our University of Victoria board of governors on Mr. Partridge for what was described in the press as "unfulfilled expectations."

It is not clear exactly whose expectations were unfulfilled, but at least it is a touching farewell which will do much to reassure the taxpayer that ex-president Partridge indeed has the interests of the University of Victoria at heart, while the board of governors indeed have Mr. Partridge's interests at heart (which is what you might call a truely beautiful demonstration of "give and take" on a scale which, while it does our affluent society credit, is nevertheless just a bit too grand for us little fellows at the bottom to swallow in one large gulp). But then life's like that—some birds don't fit their nests; and some nest-eggs don't fit their birds. However, when our good humor returns with the flowers in spring, we shall no doubt be singing "Where have all the feathers gone, long time passing."

Off the Walks

Usually your editorial articles are models of good sense and soufid reasoning, but for sheer irresponsible nonsense one in last Saturday's paper would be hard to surpass.

I refer to the ridiculous suggestion that bicycle riding be permitted on sidewalks in designated areas of the city.

This dangerous and illegal practice is already much in use among younger cyclists, even on crowded sidewalks in the business section, to the danger of pedestrians in general, and in particular to the aged and infirm, and also to young children.

One cannot imagine how a mature mind can possibly approve the idea of this inconsiderate behavior becoming legal. The proper place to ride bicycles is in the road way, where cyclists have equal rights with motorists.

Rather than cycling on sidewalks being encouraged those caught doing so should be booted off them in no uncertain manner.

HERBERT A. NAPPER,

Drivel

"Suffering ennobles," does it, according to Dr. Stuart Rosenberg in your paper? This is sentimental drivel. Far from ennobling, suffering embitters and warps the personality. And if the good doctor ever went outside the city and used his eyes, he would know that trees exposed to cold winds are dwarfed and mis-shapen — picturesque, if you like, but certainly not "tall and mighty," as he would have us believe. Of course if a man's life is always pleasant and easy he will miss a sense of achievement in overcoming odds, but there is no positive merit in being miserable or enduring pain. This philosophy leads to the complacent belief that we need not trouble ourselves unduly about the woes of others; a little suffering will do them good.

PERKINS — by John Miles

Economics May Solve Highrise Controversy

The controversy over highrise construction may have entered a new stage in Victoria.

The incident that could have far-reaching effects on Victoria's development scene came quietly and unobtrusively in the form of a request for rezoning of a parcel of land in Victoria West. The uniqueness of the application was that it asked council to rezone the property from its present highrise category to low-rise.

West Bay Investments Ltd., a subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Realty, a well-known Victoria firm, informed council it doesn't want to build a highrise structure on the property adjacent to the Princess Patricia apartment building.

A spokesman for the firm said current adverse reaction to highrises had been one of the reasons that prompted the company to abandon plans for a twin-tower to the Princess Patricia in favor of a three-storey apartment building.

He hastened to add that economic considerations had been the most decisive factor in the change of plans. It was cheaper, on a per-suite basis, to build a low-rise structure. While the first reason is very gratifying, because it proves that big companies are sensitive to public opinion, the second one is probably the more significant.

Under some circumstances, it is actually more profitable to build a three-storey apartment structure than a highrise.

Hubert Beyer

This being so, why on earth have so many urban developers promoted the contsruction of highrises for so long?

There is no simple answer to that question. First, one must determine what constitutes a highrise. In a Prairie village, a five-storey building would probably stick out like a sore thumb. In the particular atmosphere of Victoria's downtown, a highrise probably begins beyond 10 storeys, while on Cook or Shelbourne a seven-storey building would probably look too high.

* * *

The highrise game really began in New York where because of its geographical limitations, Manhattan was forced to build into the sky, rather than expand.

In the early days, with no zoning restrictions developers could cram any number of floors on the smallest piece of land to maximize their profits. The fact that the city itself was slowly pushed to the brink of bankruptcy didn't concern the developers.

With the advent of zoning limitations and the restrictions on density, the profit to be made on highrises began to shrink in other parts of the continent. For example, in New York, it is still permitted to cover a complete building site with 70 storeys, or half the site with 140 storeys. This is known as a floor-space ratio of 1-70.

In Victoria, the maximum floor-space ratio allowed is1-4. This means that a developer can cover a total building site area with four floors, half the site with eight, and so on.

* * *

To build a 25-storey structure in Victoria, a developer must assemble a fair-sized lot. A three-storey building, on the other hand, may be constructed of wood according to Canada's national building code; no concrete is necessary. Therefore, construction costs per suite are substantially below those of highrises.

But why are highrises still built, if that's the case? The answer to this often lies in what kind of developer is involved.

There are basically two kinds of developers. One is an established firm that will usually assemble the property, build the structure and may even manage it. Slegg Realty, and its development arm, West Bay Investments Ltd., falls into that category.

* * *

The other type of developer is in reality a speculator. He operates with a minimum of capital, wheels and deals, makes a good profit in the end, but has no stake in the community.

To give an example: A Victoria resident with a sizeable piece of property was approached by a developer last year. Would he be willing to sell his property?

The developer offered $100,000 for the land, but he wanted an option for one year. He offered the resident $500 for the option. The land was zoned residential and had the resident agreed to the terms, he would have been tied down for 12 months, during which time he would have been unable to sell to anyone else.

Having obtained the option, the developer would then have asked the city to rezone the property from residential to highrise. Hopefully, there would have been some controversy — not too much, mind you — ending in council's approval of the rezoning application.

The moment the property was rezoned, the developer would have been able to sell it for $200,000. His only investment was $500; the profit would have been $100,000.

The myth of the profitability of all highrise construction hasn't been destroyed yet, so the developer would easily have found a buyer for his land. Having paid twice the amount of the land's initial value, the new owner would have had no choice but to build a highrise on it.

* * *

This case is not an isolated one. In a number of developments the original price of a piece of property has been pushed up three and four times.

Unfortunately, these kinds of developers are common, and as long as councils continue to play into their hands, they will thrive.

So, the application for rezoning by West Bay Investments may prove to be the turning point in Victoria. Hopefully, the full implications of that application will be recognized by council and life may become a little more complicated in Victoria for real estate speculators and developers.

Busia Ignored Inflation

Economics at Root of Ghana Crisis

By CY FOX, from London

The latest coup in Ghana reflects a deepending economic crisis in that Commonwealth country and extends still further the power exercised by army officers in the states of black Africa which achieved independence in a flush of civilian enthusiasm more than a decade ago.

An army-backed takeover in Uganda was the last previous military coup in Africa. The pattern on that occasion was similar to the Ghana revolt.

Uganda's Milton Obote was out of his country for the 1971 conference of Commonwealth leaders in Singapore when officers at home unleashed their successful rebellion.

* * *

In Ghana, Prime Minister Kofi Busia was absent in London when the army seized power in the name of economic solvency and anti-corruption. It was the West African nation's most recent political convulsion.

Six years ago, Kwame Nkrumah also was out of Ghana when the army struck, ending his period of authoritarian control as president.

* * *

The fact of army supremacy has been repeatedly demonstrated throughout former colonial Africa, from the equatorial areas of which Ghana forms a part to the Arab nations of the north.

Probably Busia's sole claim to African fame lies in the contention that the 1969 election which returned him to office was an almost unique example of democratic polling so far as the black states of the continent are concerned.

Nkrumah, still in exile, may be savoring the news of Busia's overthrow, especially since the ex-president was reviled as an arch-enemy of the now-deposed prime minister.

The fact is that Busia's government survived only through army acquiescence, despite its claims to being democratically elected.

Nkrumah, pioneer symbol of African independence in the 1950s, had accumulated vast debts for Ghana through his giant public works program, which included such projects as a palatial assembly building in Accra and a big highway traversing the largely undeveloped country.

* * *

Busia found himself saddled with the immense foreign financial obligations incurred by Nkrumah's extravagance. These debts he tried to honor. But in doing so he apparently neglected inflation, which has ravaged the Ghanaian domestic economy.

Moreover his detractors insist that he showed little sympathy for demands that the nation-wide wage rates should be raised as a means of enabling hard-pressed Ghanaian workers to cope with the steep increases in their cost of living.

* * *

Adding to Busia's troubles was the sharp drops in the world market for Ghana's chief product, cocoa. And as part of the same general crisis, the Ghanaian currency has suffered a stiff devaluation.

The military rebels maintain that civilians as well as soldiers are involved in the revolt against Busia. But the army is certain to retain supreme control, even if this is exercised in the name of proletarian rights or other radical-sounding causes.

Mystery of Hanoi's War Lifeline Explained

How 'Trail' Survives

By DENIS WARNER
From Canberra

Ten years ago an American editor, seemingly dubious about my account of the Ho Chi Minh trail, asked me to explain why it could not be easily destroyed by bombing. The U.S. Air Force has been asking the same question ever since.

Today, for the first time, the North Vietnamese are providing some of the answers.

During the last monsoon season the trail was badly damaged by floods. Yet despite the demands on labor in North Vietnam, where every available able-bodied man, woman and child was mobilised to fight the Red River floods, the 55th Transportation Group, which looks after the trail and its supplies, had an unprecedented army of 75,000 men to call on for repair and maintenance work.

The trail has been described by a Vietnamese general as more of a cobweb than a road. The description is apt. From the Mu Gia Pass, where the trail leaves North Vietnam and enters Laos, there are altogether 4,000 miles of roads, tracks and waterways running through a corridor about 30 miles wide. This network is the trail.

* * *

When the American bombers hit one stretch of the trail, the traffic co-ordinators switch the truck convoys to any of a dozen or more alternative routes. If truck transport is held up, bicycle brigades using narrow tracks under the jungle canopy take over.

Literally, tens of thousands of trucks have been destroyed, but somehow supplies get through.

A blazing cover of some 3,000 anti-aircraft guns, and SAM missiles at the Mu Gia Pass, play their part, but there is more to it than that.

With the closing of the port of Sikanoukville to the North Vietnamese, the trail has become increasingly important. The oil-pipeline from the North Vietnamese port of Vinh has been extended all the way to southern Laos, which is now becoming a vast supply base for renewed offensives in Cambodia and South Vietnam.

For years Hanoi made no reference to the existence of the trail, but nowadays reports about life along the "Truong Son Route," as Hanoi calls it, are increasing in number.

To survive the constant bombing, the North Vietnamese engineers live underground in "houses" made of steel containers. In every cluster of "houses" there are big mounds and more solidly reinforced shelters. Wooden constructions, or thick layers of bamboo, are used as protection against pellet bombs.

The storing of food was an initial problem, but now each staging base along the trail has its own cultivated plot. Poultry rearing has become a "policy."

Fish are plentiful in the rivers and wild animals in the mountains provide fresh meat. One writer spoke of eating tiger, leopard, chicken, deer and elephant and of a dead perch, killed by bombing, that weighed more than 70 pounds.

* * *

Even bomb containers have been turned to use. The yellow metal containers for American pellet bombs have been made into boxes and cups. Until the Americans stopped using parachute cloth for their flares, and substituted paper, which was cheaper, the North Vietnamese made hammocks, mosquito nets, covers, curtains and signal flags.

An estimated 2,000 trucks a night are now using the trail. They are reserved strictly for the movement of supplies on the southbound journey.

* * *

The troops have to walk. They move in battalions of 500 to 600 men through narrow trails, covering about 20 miles a day. They are looked after at staging posts by liaison troops, who are equipped with field kitchens and whose job it is to supply the fighting men with hot meals.

For these men life is less rigorous than it used to be, but the journay nevertheless is still no picnic. American air raids often throw the best laid food distribution plans into disarray. Malaria, dysentery and beriberi also take a heavy toll.

It is the measure of Hanoi's determination that the flow goes on.

Chinese Remain Divided By Language Barriers

CNS, from Peking

Among the many problems which China knows she must solve before becoming an equal partner of the world's industrial countries is the unification and modernization of the Chinese language. When they talk about unification of the Chinese language, they mean the spoken language, because the same characters are in use throughout the vast country.

Spoken Chinese, however, varies greatly, with the difference being most marked between north and south. A man from Peking needs an interpreter if he wishes to converse with one from Canton. Cantonese, which is also spoken in Hong Kong and by many overseas Chinese, bears no resemblance today to the language spoken in Peking or other northern cities and areas.

North and South China are not only divided by the enormous difference in their spoken language. For centuries there has been mutual distrust, even hostility on all levels and it is not unusual today to hear a Cantonese refer to a Pekingnese with contempt — and vice versa.

* * *

However, the strength of China's government today rests, among other things, on a unified country, free of regional hostilities. A necessary first step to ridding the country of such regionalism is, of course, a common language. First efforts to do this go back much farther than the present government's existence. As early as the beginning of this century, there were attempts to modernize the language and introduce a common spoken word.

When Chairman Mao Tse-tung's communists took over in 1949, one of the first tasks they pursued with great determination was the introduction of "putong hua" or "high Chinese," which foreigners usually call "Mandarin."

Essentially, this is the Peking dialect, stripped of its local characteristics. Obviously radio and television are perfect vehicles for spreading the common spoken language. However, to this day, the Chinese authorities find it necessary to broadcast some programs in the various local dialects.

* * *

In schools, only "putong hua" is taught However, there is a shortage of teachers who are able to speak it well. Besides, the children hear their own regional dialect spoken at home. Thus it is not an easy task to have them grow up speaking Mandarin. However, some progress is being made.

The language problem is further complicated by the fact that there is not just one southern dialect, but many, each in turn barely or not at all understandable by the people speaking another. In the north, there also are differences in pronunciation of the Mandarin dialect. For the most part, the differences are slight. For example, an "s" is pronounced as in "sun" in one area and as in "shun" in the next. But people can at least communicate with each other.

Then there are China's border areas where minorities live who do not speak Chinese, but their own distinct language.

In addition to wishing the country to have one spoken language, the Chinese authorities also have set out to simplify the ancient Chinese characters in use today. The ultimate aim is to drop the system of characters and substitute the Latin alphabet.

However, it is not an easy thing to abolish a system of writing — and thinking — used for thousands of years in China. And it will probably take several generations to make a success of it.

Militant Priest Wins Freedom

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court has reversed the contempt sentence given militant priest James Groppi for leading a welfare demonstration onto the floor of the Wisconsin legislature.

In a unanimous decision written by Chief Justice Warren Burger, the court said the legislature had given Father Groppi neither a statement of the charges against him nor a chance to respond.

It was the second time that Father Groppi, a slender, bespectacled white leader of civil rights causes in Milwaukee, had won a favorable verdict from the supreme court. A year ago the court ruled that he had the right to get his trial on charges of resisting arrest during a 1967 open housing demonstration removed from Milwaukee.

Under an 1848 Wisconsin law, the legislature voted 71 to 24 on Oct. 1, 1969, to cite Father Groppi for leading 1,000 persons onto the floor two days earlier in a protest against cuts in welfare payments. The resolution, passed while he was in jail, specified a term in Dane County jail for six months or the duration of the legislative session, whichever was shorter.

HOLLYWOOD — Charlie Chaplin will return to Hollywood for the first time in nearly 20 years to accept an honorary Oscar for his movie achievements, the Motion Picture Academy has announced. Daniel Taradash, Academy president, said the board of governors had voted the award to Chaplin for "the incalculable effect he has had in making motion pictures the art form of this century."

The 27-year-old Calgary truck driver is accused of an unprecedented Canadian hijack during which a DC-8 hopscotched through skies over Alberta, Saskatchewan and Montana before its hijacker was subdued by a crew member with a fire axe.

HAMBURG, Germany — The trial of two men charged with murdering Jews in the Warsaw ghetto during the Second World War is likely to begin this year following a 10-year investigation, state justice ministry officials said. BALTIMORE — Glen McGraw, 25, and Deborah Demar, 22, married Wednesday, were separated on their wedding night by the walls of the Maryland penitentiary. McGraw was sentenced to 10 years in prison for a street holdup, but Judge Basil Thomas allowed him to marry his sweetheart of the last four years before going off to jail.

Black Students Learn Lesson About Dixie

ST. LOUIS, Mo. (UPI) — A federal appeals court, calling Dixie a "typical American song," has ruled unanimously that the song is not offensive to all blacks.

The Eighth U.S. Court of Appeals Wednesday denied an appeal by 29 black students at Jonesboro, Ark., who claimed their constitutional rights had been violated when they were suspended from school for walking out of a rally when Dixie was played.

"Dixie," the court said, "is known and loved throughout the world."

Canada To Ask Cuba For Hijack Suspect

OTTAWA (CP) — Sometime in the next two weeks Canada is expected to make a formal request for the extradition of a 24-year-old New Yorker alleged to have hijacked an Air Canada jet to Cuba Dec. 26.

The case will be a precedent setter in many ways.

So far as is known here, no country has ever officially asked Cuba to return any of those who have hijacked airplanes to the Caribbean island.

Cuba has never permitted extradition of a hijacker.

The man Canada wants to get hold of is Patrick Dolan Critton, charged by police in Mississauga, Ont., near Toronto, with kidnapping, armed robbery of an aircraft, and extortion.

The man was taken into custody by authorities at Havana.

Ottawa officials do not doubt that, whatever the merits of Canada's case, the ultimate response of Cuba will be based on a political decision by Premier Castro.

Neither do they doubt that a big factor in his decision will be Canada's importance to Cuba as one of only two countries in the Americas that have maintained unbroken ties with Cuba since Castro came to power 13 years ago. The other is Mexico.

In the past, Premier Castro has shown that he values good relations with Canada, especially since the U.S. ceased trading with the island in 1960.

The most telling demonstration of this attitude came eight years ago when two Canadians were charged with smuggling explosives into Cuba for the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

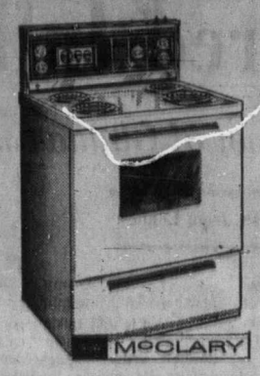

Ottawa intervened to save the two from summary execution and one of the men eventually was able to prove his innocence. The other was convicted and sent to prison.

Olympian Calls for Compromise

More Gas Export Skagit Issue Key?

Colonist Reporter

OLYMPIA, Wash. — A top Washington state official proposed here Thursday Canadians practise "the art of compromise" in seeking a solution to the controversy over further flooding of Skagit Valley.

Bert Cole, who heads the state department of natural resources, called for increased exports of natural gas to the U.S. which could then be used in relatively pollution-free thermal generating stations. He said this would lessen the need for new hydro projects like the proposed raising of the Ross Dam, which will cause Skagit flooding.

The state official, whose opposite number in B.C. is Resources Minister Ray Williston, told a hearing of a Washington pollution study committee that NDP MLAs had presented a "stacked" argument against further flooding of the Skagit.

"This confrontation isn't rosy for either of us," Cole said. "If Canada let us have more gas, maybe there wouldn't be such a great need to raise hydroelectric power generation because we could use thermal generation, which isn't so damaging to the ecology."

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett, who led a group of nine of his party's MLAs on a two-day visit to the state legislature, told the committee his party is "diametrically and unalterably opposed" to further flooding of Skagit Valley, including 6,000 acres in B.C., by adding 125 feet to the Ross Dam.

Wayne Bishop, spokesman for Seattle City Light which is conducting the Skagit project, said he didn't want to get into an argument of the merits or demerits of the case. "I just want to make it clear that we aren't arbitrarily pushing up the reservoir so floodwaters march into your country. We did take the precaution of negotiating an agreement with th provincial government of B.C. several years ago."

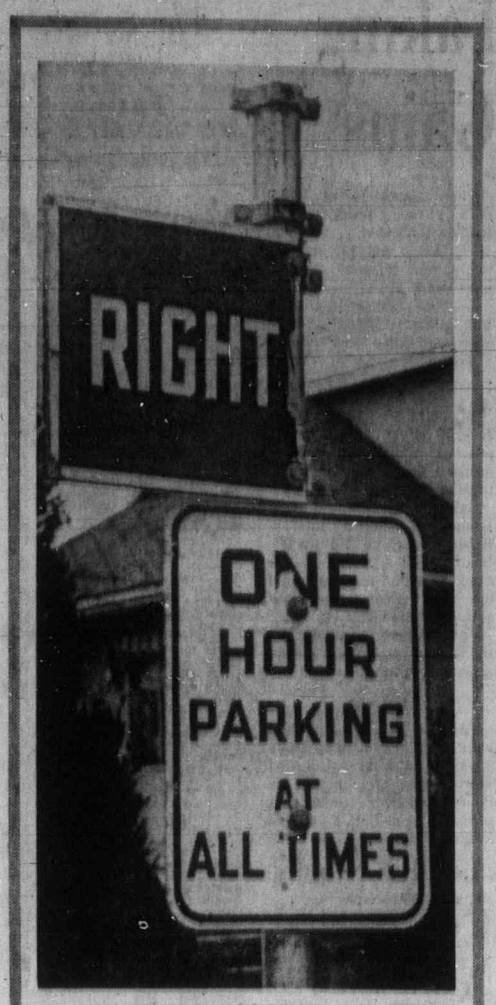

Seattle City Light has spent several hundred thousand dollars on studies to determine the effects of the proposed flooding, Bishop said. The findings will be presented later this year at hearings of the U.S. federal power commission, which will provide "an objective review of the whole project."

Barrett praised the position taken by John Biggs, director of the state department of ecology, in opposition to the Skagit project. Biggs based his decision on what he called substantial detrimental environmental effects and said Seattle City Light had no proper plan for increasing its facilities for power generation.

Earlier Cole said the state department of resources was seriously studying the geothermal energy potential in northwest Washington. Already three areas of high potential have been located and the department is seeking risk capital for further exploration work, he said.

Cole said the potential for power generation exists both in the form of steam from underground sources and naturally hot rocks which can also provide steam when water is pumped down to them. He said a second conference to discuss this new source of pollution-free power will be held in the state in mid-February with B.C. officials taking part.

He also said a year of public hearings by a state committee into nuclear power generation was almost complete, and he added that out of it will come recommendations which could include specific sites for nuclear power stations in Washington.

Wharfage Solution Temporary

The chronic winter wharfage congestion in Victoria harbor has been temporarily alleviated following a meeting Thursday.

The Victoria Fishermen's Wharfage and Harbor Committee reached an agreement with officials of Marathon Realty, a division of CPR, to use a portion of the CPR wharf on Belleville, for fishboat tie-up from now until spring.

"This is only a stopgap measure. There is only room for 40 boats at the CPR wharf, whereas Victoria could use space for 500," the committee spokesman said.

Another committee member, Matti Loukkanen, 1955 Townley, said the space would only be available until May, and a long-term solution to the congestion was still needed.

First B.C. Confirmation

Horse Virus Kills Man

The B.C. Public Health Service says an Okanagan man has died from a form of encephalitis that is common among horses.

It is the first death that has ever been confirmed in B.C. from western equine encephalomyelitis, which last year was found in 57 horses, 10 of which died.

In addition to the single fatal case among humans, two other persons came down with the disease but they have recovered. Public health officials in Victoria did not have a full description of the victims.

Birds are the virus' natural host and it is carried to humans and horses by mosquitoes.

The health department said that during the summer of 1971 conditions were ideal in the Okanagan for mosquito propagation. The minimum temperature was near 80 degrees for several months and there was a lot of stagnant water.

Coincidentally, the reservoir of the virus was building up in the host birds.

The health department has suggested that horses continue to be inoculated against the disease and that spraying be considered to control mosquitoes.

Profit Taking Halts Gains

TORONTO (CP) — Base metal issues edged fractionally higher while most other sectors closed lower in active trading Thursday.

One analyst said the market "suffered heavily under pressure from a round of profit-taking on actively-traded issues. It was, however, expected after the market's excellent performance in recent weeks."

Prices dropped lower right from the opening bell with western oil stocks recording the sharpest declines. A minor rally midway through the session erased part of the losses, however, observers termed the turnabout "primarily technical" and by mid-afternoon prices in most sectors had resumed their downward trend.

Prices Dip

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices took a dip but floated gradually upward in the afternoon and recovered most of the losses. Trade was active.

The trend was a continuation of the softening process that began in the latter part of Wednesday's session, when heavy trading reduced earlier broad gains.

Profit-taking was credited with Thursday's declines, but brokers noted that selling pressure was not heavy.

Higher among Canadians were Hudson Bay Mining, up ⅝ at $22⅝; Dome Mines, up ½ at $57⅞; McIntyre Porcupine, ahead ½ at $92½; Distillers Seagrams and Walker-Gooderham, each up ⅝ at $36⅛ and $45, respectively, and Granby Mining, ahead ¼ at $18.

Genstar Ltd. lost ½ at $13⅞ International Nickel ⅜ at $33⅝, and Canadian Pacific ¼ at $14⅛.

Light Trade

MONTREAL (CP) — After several days of steady upward movement, prices dropped in light to moderate trading.

Gains on the Montreal Stock Exchange included International Paper, up 5⅝ to $35. One analyst referred to the stock as a thin issue and said the rise reflected increased activity in the U.S.

The company announced a cut in newsprint prices on the American market.

Active

VANCOUVER — Prices were up in active trade. In industrial issues, Imperial Marine was up. 10 at 1.90. Peace River Petroleum gained .01½ at .15½ and Afton again led mines up .33 at 2.11.

December Exports Increase

Industrial Production Down

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's industrial production declined in November, while the nation's December exports recorded a large increase, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The seasonally adjusted index of industrial production fell to 181.1 from the October mark of 181.7. All the decline came from manufacturing.

The index is adjusted to remove normal seasonal variations and based on 1961 production equalling 100.

Production in mining was up to 186.3 from 183.2, while electric power, gas and water rose to 212.3 from 208.1.

But the manufacturing index dropped to 176.5 from 178.4. Non-durable manufacturing — foods, textiles, paper and chemical products — remained the same at 158.5.

The manufacturing decline came in durable products, whose index fell to 199.4 from 203.5. Among the largest declines in durable production were drops in manufacturing of primary metal, transportation equipment and electrical products.

Some durable goods bucked the trend by recording seasonally-adjusted rises in their production indexes, notably furniture and fixtures and machinery industries.

Exports rose to $1.55 billion in December from $1.39 billion a year earlier, bringing the 1971 grand total to $17.85 billion, up 5.5 per cent from 1970's $16.91 billion, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The figures are preliminary, subject to change later when more complete export data is available.

There was a 10.4-per-cent increase in exports to the United States, with the total ricing to $12.15 billion from $11.01 billion in 1970.

Exports to all other principal markets were down for the year, including reductions of 8.3 and 8.6 per cent in sales to the United Kingdom and European Common Market.

The export figures included an 88.5-per-cent increase in sales of wheat, rising to $95.2 million for 1971 from $50.5 million in 1970. Exports of nickel ores, concentrate and scrap more than doubled, at $48.6 million from $21.9 million.

The biggest category of exports — passenger cars and chassis — rose by 11.1 per cent to $175.5 million from $158 million.

Living Cost Increase Largest in 10 Years

OTTAWA (CP) — The government's critics had a field day with figures Thursday when Statistics Canada reported the consumer price index rose to 136.3 in December from 135.4 in November.

Based on 1961 prices equalling 100, this was an increase of seven-tenths of one per cent in the month, and a full five per cent from the December, 1970, index of 129.8.

It was as big an increase as any in the last 10 years for the month of December, and the five-per-cent increase for the year was well ahead of the price-stability goal of not more than two per cent a year.

The statistics bureau said the increase was mainly attributable to higher food prices, with out-of-season fresh vegetables leading the way. The increase was also attributable to the fact that in December a year ago, food prices were lower than usual because of that fall's supermarket price war.

Opposition party critics jumped on the report as evidence of too much inflation. Finance Minister Edgar Benson said the increase was not serious or somthing to worry about "at this time." He said the average price level for the 12 months of 1971 was only 2.9 per cent above the average for 1970.

Benson said it was not proper to compare the level of prices last month with what it was 12 months earlier when the country was enjoying the benefits of lower food prices brought on by a supermarket price war. The increase in vegetable prices from December, 1970 to December, 1971 — about 17 per cent — was "very misleading."

"If you take out the volatile food price index, prices have been increasing over the past several quarters by about three per cent a year, and when the final figures are in, the price factor in the whole of the gross national product — not just consumer prices — will be about three per cent."

The finance minister said Canada faced no immediate problem with prices for the next several months, but would have to watch them as the economy continues its expansion.

"If people are reasonable in their demands, one could move through this rapid expansion without undue price increases."

George Hees (PC—Prince Edward-Hastings), former Conservative trade minister, said the latest month's increase was 0.7 per cent and 12 times that, for a year, was clearly 8.4 per cent. For Benson to use any other figure "is just plain dishonest," he said.

Hees called for new wage and price guidelines, backed up with a firm government promise to introduce wage and price controls if management and labor don't observe the guidelines.

American Dollar Falls to New Low

LONDON (UPI) — The American dollar fell to a new low in West Germany Thursday and persistent selling pressure drove the U.S. currency lower in several other European centres.

Dealers gave a variety of reasons for the dollar's new weakness, ranging from international suggestions that the West German mark and the Japanese yen are still undervalued despite the mid-December currency realignment to a warning from a leading British banker, Sir Frederic Seebohm, that there could be another currency crisis before the end of the year.

American bankers were quoted in the German press as urging another 2 per cent upward revaluation of the West German mark.

There was also a call for early action by the six European Common Market countries to narrow the margins of fluctuation between their own currencies.

Nervousness about the dollar has mounted steadily on exchanges this week.

A number of explanations have been discussed including the sale by Libya of millions of dollars for West German marks after the oil rich country had withdrawn its funds from London banks and transferred the sterling into dollars after Libya seized British petroleum assets in that country.

Coast Dock Walkout Threat To Vancouver

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Port of Vancouver would be in serious trouble if a dock strike resumes Monday on the west coast of the United States, Acting Port Manager William Duncan said Wednesday.

He said this would slow down operation of the port and seriously affect its efficiency.

The British Columbia Maritime Employers' Association has issued a bulletin to all members advising of the possibility of a U.S. strike Monday.

A strike by 13,000 members of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union on the U.S. west coast was halted last Oct. 6 by a U.S. federal injunction.

The 80-day injunction expired Christmas Day but work and negotiations have continued.

In San Francisco, site of the negotiations, the chief federal mediator said Wednesday he has told longshore negotiators that he will recommend a government-imposed settlement if they fail to reach agreement on a contract.

Opportunities Deadline Set

OTTAWA (CP) — A firm deadline of March 8 was announced Thursday by State Secretary Gerald Pelletier for project applications to the 1972 Opportunities for Youth program.

Over-all federal spending to provide jobs, travel or other activity for students this summer will rise to $85 million from last year's $67 million.

Pelletier told a news conference the target will be 75,000 jobs, against 69,154 last year. But this would be "marginal" in terms of the 1.3 million university, community college and high school students expected to seek jobs.

That number is more than 100,000 above last year. Pelletier said estimates made by the manpower department may be high. In any event, private employers would be asked to increase efforts to provide summer jobs.

Opportunities for Youth will take near $34 million, $9 million more than last year, of the $85 million total. The target is 29,125 paid jobs — salary not more than $90 a week — against 27,832 last year.

An important change is that the provinces will have more to say about the location and nature of projects.

Pelletier denied that any province will have a veto. But a project that was opposed by a province would not get funds.

A new rule would end financing of projects "for periodicals that indulge in politician partisanship or systematic confrontation."

When a reporter asked whether "frivolous" projects such as a two-minute, $2,000 film on the eating of a spaghetti dinner will be funded — one was last year — Pelletier defended the film.

He said well-known Canadian film-maker Norman McLaren might have made the same type of experimental film 30 years ago. McLaren's biography says he once made an animated film on gas cooking.

Pelletier said the employment situation should be better this summer than last. But Opportunities for Youth "isn't the answer" to a problem that has become an annual one.

"There's no other way out as long as the academic year is organized the way it is now," he said.

Transport May Turn Landmark

ARCH-A-WAT, Wash. (AP) — The tangled wreckage of the troop transport Gen. M. C Meigs may become a permanent landmark of this isolated northern Washington seascape a navy spokesman said Thursday

Civilian and naval salvage experts reported Thursday it would be impossible to tow the two halves of the ship out to deep water and navy officials said it may be too expensive to break it up and move it

Dominican Fugitives Asked To Surrender

SANTO DOMINGO (UPI) — Two fugitives who survived a 16-hour assault by about 2,500 Dominican troops in which 13 persons died, were asked Thursday to turn themselves in to avoid further bloodshed.

The men, lawyer Plinio Matos Moquette and Harry Jimenez Castillo, escaped at nightfall from a cave nine miles from Santo Domingo, where four of their companions were killed, along with nine soldiers in Wednesday's day-long shootout. Another six soldiers were wounded.

The secretary of the armed forces, Rear-Admiral Ramon Emilio Jimenez Jr., said the pursuit of the men, accused of plotting a terrorist campaign to begin later this month, would continue in a rocky, thickly vegetated area where they were believed to have fled between the capital and Las Americas international airport.

Other Rangers Erupt As Big Line Gagged

BEHIND THE GLASS

By JIM TANG

WHY?: Curling rules stipulate that rinks must use the same rotation of play throughout a competition as observed in the first end of the first game. It's a rule that has provoked little comment and has generally been accepted without question but thinking about it has brought a reaction: Why?

It is, of course, understandable that there should be no lineup switching once a game has started but there doesn't appear to be one good reason why rinks shouldn't be able to change the order of its original four curlers from game to game in any competition.

The way it is now in bonspiel play, rinks must start an event with a full complement of four players and maintain the same rotation throughout. But any changes can be made, even to presenting a complete new lineup, for another event. So, why not allow the starting four players in any event to switch around from game to game as they might desire? It certainly cannot be a harmful thing and it could add a lot of interest to bonspiel play.

And the same thing should apply for playoffs. If a rink believes it would have a better chance against a certain opponent if it changed its rotation of play it should be allowed to make the change. It's something that probably wouldn't be used often but being able to make switches from game to game could add a new dimension to a sport too often caught up in not making changes for the sake of not changing.

And while on the subject, rules regarding the lineup are often conveniently bent, broken or ignored.

Rule 12 states that "Any rink not having its full complement of four players shall be disqualified, except in the case of illness or accident during the competition . . ."

That makes it quite clear that any rink which has a member rush to the club to throw first-end rocks and then leave because of job commitments is not complying with the rule which requires four starters for the first game of an event. It is in flagrant violation of the rules, and it is also against the rules to carry on with three players even if the rink was complete throughout the first game — unless the absence was caused by "illness or accident during the competition."

INCOMPARABLE: There can be nothing in curling, and on a comparative basis, perhaps nothing in any other Canadian sport, to rival the record of Garnet Campbell.

Campbell, who could make Duane Thomas break the conversational ice, has been on a provincial championship rink 10 times. That would be phenomenal if he lived in Newfoundland but winning 10 purple hearts in Saskatchewan is in its field as much of an accomplishment as winning the U.S. Open golf championship 10 times. It's tough enough to triumph in the Brier final but it's much tougher to get there, particularly when you have to qualify out of one of the prairie provinces.

Campbell started his amazing streak in 1947 as skip of the four all-Campbell rinks which had a chance to win the Brier Tankard and last spring, 24 years later, was in the Canadian final for the fourth consecutive time and for the fifth time in six years.

He has made it four times as a skip, four times as a vice-skip and twice while playing second rocks. And while it is true that he played on only one Canadian championship rink — in 1955, his rink tied for the top spot last year before losing in a playoff, he has been the runner-up four other times, finished third three times and has won 73 Brier games while losing 25. Hats off.

* * *

NORTH HAS 10: While 32 rinks take part in the south Vancouver Island men's playoffs at Duncan this weekend, 10 will be matching shots in the north Island showdown in Port Alberni.

They are the representatives from five clubs — two each from the Alberni Valley, Comox Valley, Nanaimo, Campbell River and Fort Rupert (Port Hardy) clubs. A disappointing part of the club-level north playdowns was the lack of entries from Qualicum and Tofino and the fact that no playoff was needed at the Comox Valley club.

Chuck Perry, who made it to the provincial final in the mixed playoffs last year and has already won an Island spot in the PCCA mixed this year, and Dennis Vicklund will represent the CVCC in the Consols playdowns. Bob Carscadden, Cyril Raskob and Harvey Herauf are with Perry and Jack Hawkins, Gabe Sehn and Wally Kruschal form the supporting cast for Vicklund.

Ron Hungle, who curled out of the Victoria CC last year, skipped Craig MacRae, Smokey Ahlstrom and Joe Manzini to one of the Nanaimo spots. The other is filled by Norm Theissen (Jack Bates, Bill Rafter, Jack Taylor).

Jack Ross (Bob Clarke, Gaye Enns, Glen Ashbee) and Dick Mosoronchon (Barry Underwood, Stan Nestibo, Graeme Strachan) represent Campbell River and Jim Marasco (Earl Ewert, Wayne Reid, Bill Berzenski) and John Hartt (Ed Bolen, Brian Toms, Ed Surry) survived the Alberni Valley playoffs.

Lineups of the Port Hardy rinks were not available.

* * *

EXTRA END: The Island senior men's playdowns, a bonspiel-type affair scheduled at the Victoria Curling Club Jan. 21-23, has drawn an entry of 28 rinks despite the early entry of Lloyd Kearns . . . rinks skipped by Terry Whittam of Nanaimo and Penny Paul of Port Alberni will represent the north in the Island schoolgirls' final at Courtenay Jan. 21-23. And 15 rinks will take part in the Island high school boys' playoff, this year a bonspiel-type playoff embracing the whole Island in the one competition. It, too, is at Courtenay, Jan. 21-23, along with the Island women's final . . . the draw for the south Island Consols final leaves something to be desired. The curlers on the last Friday night draw probably won't be off the ice until 3 a.m. Saturday. Start of the competition was reportedly held back until 6 p.m. Friday to make it possible for some curlers to start without taking any time off work. That's thoughtful in a sense but it should have nothing to do with a playoff draw because it can work a hardship on those who have arranged things so they can be free to curl as drawn.

New York Ranger's GAG line was gagged but another combination took up the slack Thursday night in Buffalo.

Walt Tkaczuk, Bill Fairbairn and Gene Carr carried the entire scoring load to lead Rangers to a 5-2 victory over the Sabres and increase their lead in the East Division of the National Hockey League to two points over Boston Bruins.

Bruins' winless streak was extended through a third game when Los Angeles Kings battled them to a 1-1 draw in Boston. It was the second straight deadlock for Boston against West Division teams. Bruins dropped a 5-3 decision Saturday to St. Louis Blues and were tied by Pittsburgh Penguins, 2-2, Wednesday.

The Penguins didn't do nearly as well Thursday, taking a 7-1 Montreal clobbering from Canadiens.

CROZIER AT HELM

Joe Crozier, making his first start as the replacement for coach Punch Imlach, who is recuperating from a heart attack, sent out Don Luce, Danny Lawson and Ron Anderson to check Rangers' big scoring line of Jean Ratelle, Vic Hadfield and Rod Gilbert, nicknamed GAG (goal-a-game) by Ranger fans.

The Luce line allowed it only five shots, two each by Ratelle and Gilbert and one by Hadfield.

PLAYING WELL

"No line has contained our big line so well yet this season as the Luce line did tonight," remarked Emile Francis, coach of the Rangers, "But, fortunately, when one line is stopped, we have others to take over. That Tkaczuk line has been playing well for us all season and started to score about 10 games ago."

In that stretch, Tkaczuk's line has accounted for 11 goals and 17 assists. Tkaczuk has six goals and six assists, Fairbairn three goals and nine assists and Carr two goals and two assists.

NINTH AND 10TH

Fairbairn got his ninth and 10th goals in the first six minutes of the opening period on passes from Tkaczuk to give Rangers a 2-0 margin going into the second period. Tkaczuk made it 4-0 with his 15th and 16th goals, with Fairbairn drawing assists each time, before Luce and Steve Atkinson closed the gap to 4-2 late in the second period.

Carr, with the ninth goal of his rookie NHL season, closed out the scoring in the final period.

While Rangers had an easy time of it, Bruins just couldn't get untracked. They had the lead late in the game but Wayne Cashman tripped and fell while trying to skate out of his own zone and Ross Lonsberry picked up the loose puck and beat Ed Johnston from close range with less than six minutes left.

BEATS VACHON

Johnny McKenzie's 12th goal of the season, four minutes and 34 seconds into the final period, opened the scoring. MacKenzie slammed the puck from just outside the crease past King's Rogatien Vachon, who stopped 37 of 38 shots.

Vachon's goaltending partner last season, Phil Myre, was robbed of a shutout when Greg Polis scored for Pittsburgh in the second period.

Pete Mahovlich and Yvan Cournoyer scored two goals each to help snap Montreal's two-game losing streak.

Guy Lapointe, Jacques Lemaire and Rejean Houle were the other scorers.

Alouettes After Landry?

DETROIT (AP) — Detroit Lions quarterback Greg Landry, still unsigned for the 1971 season and playing out his option, has received a firm offer of $500,000 for a four-year contract from Montreal Alouettes of the Canadian Football League, a Detroit newspaper says.

The Detroit Free Press says it had learned of the offer, made about three weeks ago in New Orleans, where professional football has gathered for the Super Bowl.

Landry officially becomes a free agent if the Lions don't sign him before May 1.

Terry Who?

Terry Daniels, that's who! Daniels, wearing a T-shirt advertising his hopes, meets heavyweight champion Joe Frazier in a title fight Saturday in New Orleans. Daniels, a former football player at Southern Methodist, has a 28-4-1 record with 24 knockouts but Frazier is so highly favored that Las Vegas bookies have refused to accept bets on the outcome. Soccer Speculation Ended

Regals Not Royals

By MAX LOW

Well, at last it's all out in the open.

Former referee Jack Adams said Thursday night he will head Victoria's entry — the Victoria Regals — into the new semi-professional Premier Soccer League this summer.

And Adams, a referee in the United Kingdom and Canada for 25 years, in announcing he has retired from active refereeing to take over as president and chairman of the board of directors of the Regals, came straight to the point.

"There is no connection between the Victoria Regals and the (Victoria) Royals, who operated for the last two summers in the presently disbanded Western Division of the Western Canada Soccer League," he said.

The announcement follows considerable speculation by fans and officials regarding Victoria's entry in the new league.

When the formation of the Premier League was announced at the end of last summer, teams expected to take part were listed as Vancouver Spartans of the WCSL, Columbus, Croatia and Eintracht the three drop-outs from the Pacific Coast Soccer League, a Richmond club and Victoria Royals, owned by Jim Irvine of Ladysmith.

HUGHES SIGNED

Although there is "no connection" between the Regals and the Royals, Adams said Brian Hughes, the former Welsh International who led the Royals to a WCSL title, has been signed to a one-year contract as player-manager.

And, Adams said, the Regals hope that most of Hughes' former players will line up with him.

"Hughes knows what players he wants but can't approach them until the Coast League season ends," Adams said.

OTHER OFFICIALS

Vice-president and treasurer of the new club is Ken Hibbert, who was vice-president of the Royals under Irvine.

A secretary is still to be named, Adams said. Keith Bickmore is in charge of publicity and public relations and the rest of the board is Derrick Sewell, Ted Todd, Bert Storar, Martin Adams, Rick Doyle, Harold Holroyd and Peter Bishop.

The Premier League, which runs from April 15 to Sept. 15, will have a schedule of 30 games for each club — 15 home and 15 away. The Regals will play their matches at Royal Athletic Park, mostly on Saturday nights but with an occasional game on Tuesday or Friday evenings.

LOOKING FOR TALENT

Adams said all six clubs are bringing in experienced coaches and players are being recruited from Europe, Jamaica and other places in a bid to "give fans high-calibre, competitive soccer and at the same time give our own junior, juvenile and senior players something to work for."

Bob Christopher of Vancouver, vice-president of the Premier League, has been to England to see four English clubs, Adams said. A top English League club will visit B.C. during the summer and, hopefully, will play in Victoria against the Regals, he said.

"We also hope to bring out an English Division II or III club which would play every team in the Premier League during a two or three-week stay," Adams said.

The new leader of the new club in a new league is entering his first season full of confidence and hopes of success.

"The last two summers of soccer have prepared us for what I now think will be the best soccer yet to be seen in Victoria."

Only six players showed up for Hotel Douglas at Cedar Hill Junior High School Thursday night but it was enough to set a new scoring record in the Victoria Senior "B" Men's Basketball League.

The hotelmen, leaders in the five-team league, bombed fourth-place Restoration Services, 136-98, to break a record set by last season's squad. The previous high was a 124-63 drubbing handed Robertson's on Nov. 24, 1970.

Tom Hatcher, who scored 18 points in the final half, led the winners with 30 points. Mike Taaffe, Dave Wirtanen and John Lauvaas contributed 24 points each, Corky Jossul had 21 and Bruce Vallor got the remaining 13 points. The winners romped to a 72-48 lead at halftime and had their opponents, 107-65, at one stage of the final half.

Jim Cunningham scored 28 points for Restoration Services, who also had six players dressed.

HOTEL DOUGLAS (136) — Mike Taaffe 24, Corky Jossul 21, Dave Wirtanen 24, Bruce Vallor 13, John Lauvaas 24, Tom Hatcher 30.
RESTORATION SERVICES (98) — Garry Andrews 14, Jim Cunningham 28, Dan Wade 11, Wayne Allen 20, Jim Hale 13, Dave Price 12.

Moe Hill Starts Defence of Title

NANAIMO — Moe Hill has taken his first step in defence of the Canadian Police curling championship.

Hill, who has two members left from last year's championship lineup, won the Vancouver Island Zone playoff Thursay by defeting Don McIvor, 8-5, in the final of "B" event.

The Esquimalt-RCMP combination, which has Wayne Dew replacing Bill Erickson as vice skip and Dave Wilson and Neil Dickson still on the front end, went through the 16-rink bonspiel-playoff unbeaten.

It defeated Ed Manchuk of the Colwood RCMP in the "A" final before knocking off McIvor's rink.

McIvor and Ed Kathol, Victoria RCMP, were the defeated semi-finalists in the "A" event while Don Blair of Chemainus and Stan Nestibo of Campbell River lost out in the "B" semis.

The "C" event was won by Ray Bailey's Saanich rink, which defeated Lawson Eyman of Port Alberni in the final.

Hill now goes to Kamloops for the eight-rink provincial final on Feb. 14 and 15. The Canadian final is in Hamilton in March.

Red-hot New Westminster Bruins are still roaring.

Fresh from their 6-3 triumph over Victoria Cougars at Memorial Arena Wednesday night, the Bruins returned home Thursday and slapped in three third-period goals to snap a 1-1 tie and down Swift Current Broncos, 4-1.

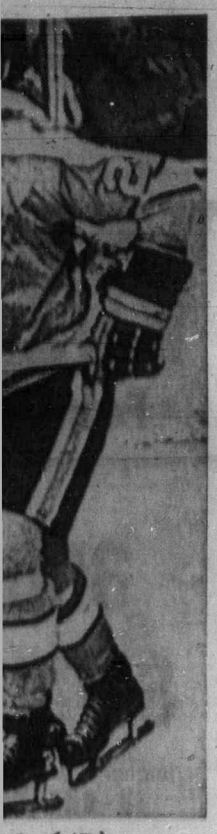

It was the 10th win in a row for the Bruins and it lifted them above idle Medicine Hat Tigers and into third place in the Western Canada Hockey League's Western Division.

Neither team was able to score in the first period and Ron Kennedy scored the only goal for the Bruins in the second period when the hosts outshot Swift Current, 16-6.

Brian Back scored early in the third period to tie the game but, with a 19-9 edge in shots in the last 20 minutes, Lorne Henning scored twice and Alex Kogler once.

The Broncos play Vancouver Nats tonight and round out a three-game series on the coast against the Cougars at Memorial Arena Saturday.

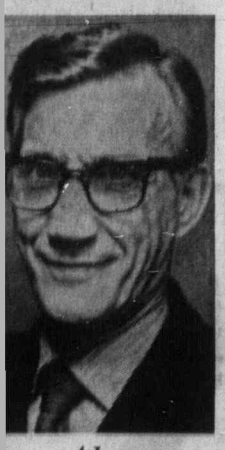

In Brandon, Ron Chipperfield scored his 33rd and 34th goals to lead the Wheat Kings to a 4-3 come-from-behind win over Winnipeg Jets.

The weather has been bitterly cold and windy on the saltchuck, but that hasn't stopped the fishermen. On Vancouver Island fishing is an every-day-of-the-year activity and anglers have been out in good numbers this week.

Fishery officials checked 80 private boats and 73 rental boats in Saanich Inlet and found an average of 1.9 fish a boat, mostly coho grilse. In Finlayson Arm waters the catch has been mostly small chinooks, but in Willis Point, Bamberton, McCurdy Point waters there has been a mixed bag of coho grilse with some good-sized chinooks. But the big chinooks haven't yet shown in Tod Inlet waters. There has been a skim of ice on the water at both Finlayson Arm and Brentwood ends of the Inlet but it has been disappearing by mid-morning.

Deep Cove to Patricia Bay waters have been productive.

Chinook Club will hold its monthly Frostbite Derby in Saanich Inlet Sunday, daybreak to noon, and it really looks like a cold one.

In Sidney-Oak Bay, Victoria to Sooke waters federal fisheries checked 247 boats, with an average of one salmon a boat, mostly chinooks in the five to 12-pound class.

Oak Bay waters have been fairly good in the early morning and again around noon, for five to 17-pounders on strip or minnow, with Fiddle Reef, The Gap and the Discovery Island lighthouse most productive spots.

James Island, Coal Island and Dock Island have been the productive spots in the Sidney area.

Cowichan Bay, Sansum Narrows, Chemainus, Tent, Thetis and Kuper Islands have all been productive and up-Island, Union Bay, Comox and Campbell River waters are producing a few chinooks.

We went up-Island last weekend with the intention of finding a nice spot by a river—we were aiming first for the Big Qualicum — and camping within a few yards of the steelheading. No way! The snow is piled so high along the highway that it is just impossible to get off the road to any spot where you could park a recreational vehicle like ours. We were amazed at the snow, five and six feet high along the roads, 10 feet in some piles. The roads were fine, but the only open spots were driveways. We settled for a motel at Campbell River and "roughed it" while snow made a blizzard outside.

Rivers were, and still are very low and it takes an expert to get a fish out of them.

Cowichan River is still the best bet and has been producing well around the highway bridges and in the riverbottom, although it is tough slugging in the riverbottom area.

The Cowichan is low, but still fishable and anglers who have been taking them, are using low-water methods, the small number 14 pink or red Spin 'n' Glo and light line. Now is the time to try drifting a single egg or to fish the riffles with a fly.

Some have tried drifting the Cowichan in a boat and two boats have turned over around the S-Pool when they came across sleeper snags just under the surface.

Big Qualicum is a controlled river, fishable but not very productive. Puntledge at Courtenay and the Campbell are controlled and fishable.

Amalgamated Conservation Society has decided to make the feeding of the fish on the Goldstream its pet project. Each of the 18 clubs in the ACS will be given a section of the river to look after and they will be able to watch the fish grow through the results of the feeding program. The club will need to raise at least $250 for feed.

The ACS will still sponsor the Opportunities for Youth program on DeMamiel and other Sooke area rivers, but the actual work will be left to the young people.

The ACS has formally submitted its $23,000 local-initiative-program for winter work. Federal fisheries have already just well said "not this year" for the proposed study of the Sooke falls and canyon, but promises to give the system "a good look in 1973."

There are five other suggested projects still to be considered for the winter work program . . . in the Sooke, Goldstream, and Cowichan area.

Ducks Unlimited (Canada), the international conservation organization, has produced a new brochure, entitled Ducks Unlimited.

The full color brochure, folded road map style, unfolds to form a wall chart measuring 22½ by 33 inches.

One side is composed of 24 water-color paintings of duck species common to Canada. The paintings, which depict both male and female of each species, were done by Ducks Unlimited's artist, Angus Shortt.

The reverse side of the chart contains a detailed story of Ducks Unlimited, their work in Canada, and the many benefits which this work produces. Information on waterfowl breeding areas, migration routes, and waterfowl banding is also given.

The brochure, which replaces the Ducks Unlimited publication Waterfowl In Canada, is available free of charge from Ducks Unlimited (Canada), 1195 Pembina Highway, Winnipeg, Manitoba, R3T 2E2.

This is an excellent brochure and we plan to have one on our wall at the Sooke seafront cabin, at our home, and in the map drawer of our motor home. It is ideal for both waterfowl shooters and for bird watchers. It is so handy that I am sure we will get hours of enjoyment from it simply trying to identify the ducks that fly into our Langford Lake waterfront.

REVIVING FASHION of yesteryears in the Bing Crosby National Pro-Am golf tournament at Pebble Beach Thursday by wearing plus-fours was Tony Jacklin of Great Britain. Many In Field Stumble But Nicklaus Cards 66

PEBBLE BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Jack Nicklaus, picking up just where he left off last year, fired a six-under-par 66 and grabbed the lead Thursday in the first round of the $140,000 Bing Crosby National Pro-Am Golf Tournament.

Nicklaus, who won four of his last five starts in 1971, was seven-under-par until he bogeyed the final hole.

He finished one stroke over the course record at Cypress Point, one of three seaside courses on the Monterey Peninsula being used for this celebrity-studded event.

Nicklaus held a three-stroke lead over Lee Trevino, Paul Moran, and Larry Mowry, tied for second at 69.

Trevino, the 1971 PGA player-of-the-year, and Moran both played at Cypress Point. Mowry was at Spyglass Hill.

The group at 70 included Al Geiberger, Dale Douglass, Bill Johnston, Tom Wieskopf, Mike Morie — and rookie Lanny Wadkins. Geiberger, Douglass and Morley were at Cypress Point, Johnston and Weiskopf at Spyglass and Wadkins at Pebble Beach.

Many of the tour regulars had their difficulties on the picturesque layouts.

Defending-champion Tom Shaw took a 77. George Archer, who won a playoff for the title in the Glen-Campbell - Los Angeles Open Monday, needed 76 strokes. Billy Casper was in a big group at 75, which included George Knudson of Toronto, the best of three Canadians.

Opening day was pure misery for Gary Bowerman of Toronto and Wayne Vollmer of Vancouver. Bowerman carded an 83 and Vollmer an 84.

HEAVILY BUNDLED

Nicklaus, 10 days short of his 32nd birthday, was making his first start of the season and completely dominated play with his near-record effort.

Heavily bundled against the chill, he was threatening to run off and hide from the rest of the field until he had his only lapse on the 18th hole, a relatively easy par four.

He got of a booming drive, but hit the branch of a tree with his second shot, the ball dropping straight down. He chipped poorly, then two-putted for a five.

The awesome Golden Bear bagged his birdies in pairs. He had seven birdies but missed six times from 12 feet or less.

He hit a three-iron shot to within four feet of the cup on the first hole and made the putt, then holed a 20-footer on the next. He chipped to within three feet for a birdie on the sixth and got another from 18 feet on the seventh.

The big blond rapped in a 45-foot putt on the 11th hole, then scored consecutive deuces on the 15th and 16th, making putts of 20 and 12 feet.

Nicklaus, who set a single season money winning record last year with $244,000, was one of the last to get away in the cool, sunny weather. It took more than five and one-half hours to play the round and he finished in the gathering dusk and increasing cold.

Thunderettes Coming To Test Maplettes

Powerful University of British Columbia Thunderettes, undefeated in two leagues this season, are Victoria Maplettes' opponents this weekend in two Senior "A" Women's Inter-City Basketball League games at Central Junior High School.

Maplettes, 4-4 this season, host UBC Saturday starting at 8 p.m. and Sunday beginning at 2:15 p.m. Maplettes, who downed Thunderettes for the B.C. title last season and went on to take the Canadian championship, are four points behind the leaders and have four games left on the schedule, all at home. A sweep of this weekend's games would clinch the title for UBC.

Coach Norm Vickery of the Thunderettes has lost only four players from last season, two of them reserves. He has seven returnees but said he "has a lot of injuries." Only one player will miss the trip to the Island. Linda McCulloch has been sidelined, probably for the season, with a knee injury.

Thunderettes are riding a 14-game streak, eight in the Inter-City league and six in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association loop.

Coach Moe Turner's Maplettes, victims twice at UBC this season, are free of injury.

UVic Teams in Lethbridge For Crucial Hoop Series

University of Victoria Vikettes start a tough four-games-in-five-nights road grind tonight which could determine a playoff spot in the Western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association Women's Basketball League.

The club, coached by Mike Gallo meets Lethbridge University tonight and Saturday then plays University of Calgary Dinnies Monday and Tuesday.

With University of British Columbia Thunderettes virtually assured of one of the two Western Division playoff berths with a spotless 8-0 record, Vikettes are aiming for the other spot. UVic has a 4-2 record with 10 games left to play.

Only Gail Carlson, sidelined with the flu, was unable to make the prairie trip. Mary Clarkson has been added to the team.

VIKINGS THERE TOO

Also in Lethbridge tonight and Saturday for games against the Pronghorns are UVic Vikings, who snapped an eight-game losing skein with a come-from-behind, 62-57 victory at Calgary last Saturday. Vikings are in third place at the halfway point of their 16-game schedule with eight points, four behind UBC Thunderbirds and University of Alberta Golden Bears. Only two teams qualify for the playoffs.

Coach Gary Taylor is still without Jim Hunter, recovering from knee surgery, and Barry Moen, out with a fractured sternum, but has a full compliment of 10 players with the addition of John Campbell, a six-foot-four forward. Campbell, a Belmont graduate in his second year at UVic, was called up from the Jayvees.

RUGBY TEAMS PLAY

Jayvees host Vancouver City College tonight and Saturday night in exhibition play. Both games start at 8 p.m.

Both UVic teams in the Victoria Rugby Union's first division during the first half of the season have pulled out of the league but have a postponed match against each other. It will be played Saturday at Centennial Stadium beginning at 2:30 p.m.

Adrian Jones of UVic is in Seattle for the Seattle invitational track and field meet Saturday. Jones accepted an invitation to compete in the two-mile event.

Beautiful B.C. Our Aim —Sierra Club

If environmental groups make a lot of noise about the practices of B.C.'s logging industry, it's because they want to keep B.C. beautiful, not because they're troublemakers, the chairman of the Victoria Sierra Club said Thursday.

Rick Careless was replying to charges in Vancouver Wednesday by B.C. Truck Loggers Association president Jack Sexton that environmentalists have damaged the forest industry seriously with their protests against logging projects and are just troublemakers.

"It's now or never," Careless said. "If environmental groups don't make noise now, beautiful B.C. will be a myth.

"We protest because we're just trying to get some show of responsibility so we'll have the prospect of something to look forward to in the future and not a landscape which is totally derelict," he said.

Logging Land Public

Sexton, who was speaking to the association's convention, also said that "the industry should not be a financial scapegoat of policies to open new roads and fishing areas to build camping grounds and trails."

However, Careless pointed out, most of the logging in the province is done on public land and so the public should have access to it.

He also said that Sexton's criticism of anti-pollution regulations such as those which forbid dumping of sediment from logged areas into streams where fish spawn was "surprising" when companies such as B.C. Forest Products and MacMillan Bloedel have recognized the importance of environmental problems.

At the same convention, forestry consultant Ian Mahood had condemned conservationists for opposing the practice of clear-cutting, in which all trees in an area are cleared rather than selectively logged.

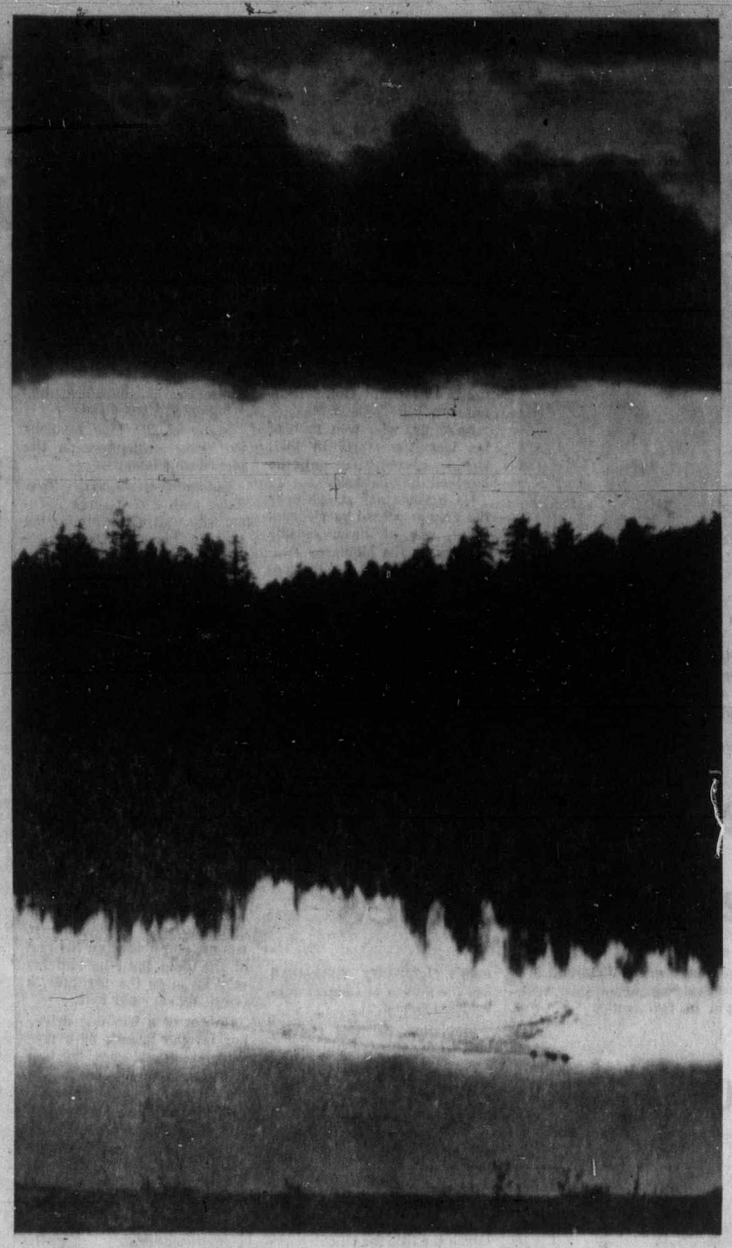

Resources Minister Ray Williston had also said it was the only practice which made economic and managerial sense in B.C.

"This follows two days after President Nixon suggested clear-cutting be abandoned in U.S. national forests," Careless said. "It just shows how far behind the times they are."

He said there were different opinions as to how harmful clear-cutting could be but it was generally agreed that it shouldn't be done on an area larger than 300 acres because of possible damage through land erosion.

"They can have a happy medium with patch-logging, which is clear-cutting on a small scale," he said.

As to Sexton's statement that B.C. was not controlled and polluted by industry "as too many confused people would have us think," Careless replied that the industry's response to the demand for the inclusion of three lakes in the Nitinat district in Pacific Rim Park showed the statement was untrue.

Engineering Study

Changes Foreseen At Finnerty Outfall

A report on the effectiveness of a sewer outfall at Finnerty Cove says that, while human waste was not seen on the beach, the system will have to be improved to meet future population growth.

The study was made by Associated Engineering Services Ltd, for the Capital Regional Board. A limited number of copies have been in the hands of Saanich officials for the past 10 days, although the report was published in October.

"The shoreline was surveyed to determine if recognizable sewage solids could be observed in the shoreline waters or deposited on the intertidal shoreline area," says the report. "Although normal sea flotsam and jetsam were observed, no solids could be seen that were recognizable as originating with the outfall."

However, since the study was received by Saanich aldermen Jan. 3, it has been discussed in the highest echelon of the municipality's administration.

At a meeting of municipal public works committee this week, Administrator-Comptroller John Tribe reported he discussed the study with Municipal Engineer Neville Life, who is ill at home.

Tribe also said he subsequently had a telephone call from Life and this in turn resulted in him having a talk with Ald. Leslie Passmore, Saanich's acting mayor.

After hearing Tribe's written report, the committee decided that discussion of the Finnerty Cove study should be withheld until all council members were present.

(Mayor Hugh Curtis was in Toronto this week on behalf of the B.C. Municipal Finance Authority and Ald. Edith Gunning was on holiday.)

No Sewage 'Solids Observed'

The outfall was built in 1962 and receives sewage from the Gordon Head-Cadboro Bay area.

"From the information available at the time of the study, it would appear that the outfall has successfully protected the contiguous bathing waters and beaches and has maintained quality standards designated by the provincial government for (waters of) recreational use," says the report.

The engineering consultants recommend, however, that as the volume of sewage increases, only comminution (slicing) plus chlorination and a diffuser pipe will be needed. The cost of such devices was estimated at $950,000.

The same system with addition of a primary treatment plant would cost $3.8 million.

Bangladesh Cabinet

Mujib Picks Up Heavy Load

From UPI

Prime Minister Mujibur Rahman Thursday appointed the top cabinet officers in the new Bangladesh government, reserving for himself four important ministeries, including defence and information.

Pakistan's president Zulfikar Ali Bhuto, in a Radio Pakistan speech monitored in New Delhi, appealed to other nations throughout the world to give him more time for a reconciliation with Mujib before recognizing the Dacca government.

But Burma, which borders both Bangladesh and China, became the seventh nation to give formal recognition to the Bangladesh nation. Burma was the first nation that is not dominated by either India or the Soviet Union to establish diplomatic relations with Bangladesh.

Mujib returned to Dacca Monday to establish a parliamentary type of government in Bangladesh. He will serve as prime minister and also handle the ministries of defence, home affairs, cabinet affairs and information and broadcasting. The posts had been held by former prime minister Tajuddin Ahmed and former home minister A. H. Kamaruzzaman.

Sources close to the Dacca government said Mujib's decision to hold the four cabinet posts, in addition to the prime minister, was significant because he will be in direct control of the Mukti Bahani guerrillas who fought for independence, and he will be responsible for maintaining law and order in the nation.

Tajuddin, the former prime minister, was named minister for finance, planning and revenue, and Kamaruzzaman, the former home minister, was named minister of relief and rehabilitation. He will be in charge of resettling the nearly 10 million refugees who fled to India during the civil war.

Demons Cast Trial Shadow

NEVADA CITY, Calif. (UPI) — The home of murder suspect Clarence Otis Smith was "possessed with demons" which "cast shadows on the walls," a Baptist preacher tesified Thursday.

Rev. Everett Richardson also said Smith threatened to kill Smith's wife Georgina and him with a sickle-like weapon the same day two campers were slashed to death. Smith, 44, pleaded innocent by reason of insanity to the slayings.

Richardson, who described himself as Smith's "spiritual counsellor," said both he and Smith worked to rid the home of the demons.

"To prevent the demons from entering the home," he said, "we covered the windows with metal foil. I observed from time to time there were strange stains on the foil which indicated demons attempted to enter the house.

"I personally saw demons in the house. They were strange objects that passed between the lights and cast shadows on the walls. They were only the lower half of a figure."

The minister testified that Mrs. Smith's 15-year-old daughter became "possessed with the demons" but he "prayed for her and cast out the demons." Richardson said the girl went to live with relatives in Texas after refusing his offer of marriage.

Former Nun Gets Jail For Child Maltreatment

ROME (Reuter) — A Rome court Thursday sentenced a former Roman Catholic nun to four years and eight months in jail for maltreating handicapped children at an institution she ran.

Maria Diletta Pagliuca, 64, founder and director of the Santa Rita institute at Grotta Ferrata outside Rome, was accused of "maltreatment of the children followed by death" and the prosecution had demanded a 24-year sentence.

The trial, one of several scandals involving nuns or former nuns in cases of mistreating children in Italian orphanages during the last few years, had aroused a furore in Italy.

But the court ruled that Miss Pagliuca was only guilty of "maltreatment" and was not responsible for the deaths of any of the children — 13 of which were exhumed during the trial.

Galaxy of Invisible Stars Forming

By VERNON SCOTT
UPI Hollywood Correspondent

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Greta Garbo has given birth to a mysterious cult of invisibility with a growing number of one-time stars becoming ever elusive to the public eye.

Marlene Dietrich was in Hollywood for a month recently. But not a soul aside from the help at the Beverly Wilshire Hotel and a few close personal friends had the slightest notion that she was anywhere but in her Paris apartment.

Jimmy Cagney is a recluse who spends most of his time in Martha's Vineyard on his farm. When he returns to Hollywood no one is the wiser.

Much travelled Ava Gardner is rarely seen. She has drawn the cloak of privacy about her even when making a movie.

Those stars who no longer work in pictures or television and who continue to live in Hollywood can be equally anonymous.

Now that the clamor has subsided Claudette Colbert lives a quiet, invisible life. She doesn't attend parties nor premieres.

Occasionally Irene Dunne will make a political appearance for a friend or at a charity benefit. But these excursions into the limelight grow increasingly rare.

When is the last time anyone took a picture of Fredric March?

Louise Rainer, who won two successive academy awards in 1936-37, lives in England and leads as private and unpublicized a life as any housewife.

Some former stars — Dietrich and Garbo — travel incognito.

It is unnecessary for others.

Deanna Durbin, a child star whose first screen kiss was a cause celebre, is free to come and go in France her adopted home, without fear of public outcry.

The presses are rolling.

Tax reform legislation has been passed by Parliament and is now law.

What does tax reform mean to you? How will it affect you?

To answer these questions, the Department is conducting a massive national mailing program. Booklets are now being printed and mailed to all taxpayers as quickly as they come off the press.

The complete mailing will be finished in about five weeks.

All taxpayers will receive at least two booklets—"Highlights for Individuals" and "Valuation Day". These should provide answers to most of your questions.

Some taxpayers will receive additional information, according to their specific needs.

Read your booklets. Afterwards, if you have questions, ask us. We'll be glad to help.

You will find that your booklets will make it easier to file your income tax return in 1973, because they will help you to prepare now.

Commons War Declared

Language Policy Faces Barrage

By RICHARD JACKSON
Colonist Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Douglas Alkenbrack, the MP who called for the firing of public service commission chairman John Carson, said today that he and his Eastern Ontario Conservatives colleagues plan making an election issue of "language discrimination" in federal government employment.

The Conservative MP for Frontenac - Lennox - Addington disclosed, too, that when the Commons resumes in mid-February, what he described as "an opposition team" will mount "a sustained attack on government staff language policy."

"Our group within the party which regards this as a fight for equal language rights in government employment," related the MP, "will hit the Trudeau cabinet with a barrage every daily question period, let them have it with a series of motions, go at them regularly in the late show (the short debate after the regular evening adjournment) and harrass them every way we can."

Why, he was asked, had it become such an issue in Eastern Ontario when most of the civil service lives in the immediate national capital area with few government employees dispersed in the regional countries?

Job Source

"Because of the young people," replied Alkenbrack. "You know, in the past, the high school and college grads from the Eastern Ontario ridings and, I presume, most of the rest of the country too, regarded Ottawa and the government as one of the more attractive job sources.

"But now treasury board president Drury has made official what we have known for some years, when he said on national TV that because of the need for more French-speaking employees in the civil service, government job openings for the English will be, as he phrased it himself, more difficult.

"So it becomes a bread and butter issue. Jobs."

Meanwhile, since Alkenbrack kicked off the controversy with his demand in the Commons for the dismissal of chairman Carson for being the "willing tool of government subversion of the civil service," support has been mounting.

Letters Coming

In agreement with his charge that the government was downgrading the merit system in favor of racial and language favoritism for francophones, have been some 78 letters reaching his Commons office.

"Not one has taken issue with me," he claimed. "They are letters not just of agreement and encouragement, but some set out the facts of cases of language discrimination."

He and his colleagues will "team" the presentation, as he describes it, of these cases in the Commons and hopefully get the issue before an investigative parliamentary committee.

"Phone calls," he asks," maybe 50 or 55."

Letters and phone calls with "real names" behind them? "Yes, many of them are," he reported, "But there are some who have said they must remain annonymous because they have been threatened with dismissal and other penalties if they contact me or make their complaints public.

"So I must protect this anonymity."

'Local' Calls

From the volume, the tone and the addresses of the mail and from the basic fact there have been so many "local" phone calls, Alkenbrack says that if he were a Liberal Ottawa MP "I'd be damn well worried."

"I am convinced the problem goes right back to Prime Minister Trudeau of course, but also to treasury board president Drury and State Secretary Pelletier who have made chairman Carson a willing instrument of their one-sided bilingualism program.

Alkenbrack, with the active support of Desmond Code, the Conservative MP for Eastern Ontario's Leeds riding, says it has been "very encouraging to see the Public Service Alliance come out against Mr. Drury's slick misrepresentation of the government's case."

And he feels he has been vindicated by Drury's frank admission that anglophones were going to find it "more difficult" to make it in the civil service.

Fair Play

"I think we are only fighting for fair play in Eastern Ontario," said Alkenbrack, "for an equal job opportunity for the majority, the English-speaking kids, with the minority francophones. And not just Eastern Ontario either, but all Canada.

"And of course we are fighting to stop any further government destruction of the merit system in advancement and promotion, to halt the sacrificing of equal opportunity to the promotion of a grossly unfairly loaded bilingual program."

As "ammunition in the fight" he solicits more mail and phone calls to his office, Room 365 West Block, Ottawa.

Nixon in China On Color TV

NEW YORK (UPI) — Communist China will provide live color television of President Nixon's historic visit to China using Western Union International's transportable satellite Earth station, it was announced Thursday.

A Western Union International spokesman said the Earth station was built by Hughes Aircraft Co. some months ago and will be flown to Peking for installation by American telecommunications experts on Feb. 1.

Doctors Making 'Killing'

BOSTON (UPI) — Dr. John Knowles, outgoing director of Massachusetts General Hospital who will become president of the Rockefeller Foundation in July, says up to 40 per cent of U.S. doctors are "making a killing" in overcharging patients, performing unnecessary surgery and in other "gouging" practices.

Victoria Takes Five In Rezoning Hassle

Shoreline Property

A rezoning controversy involving the city of Victoria, the federal government and a developer ended in a temporary stalemate Thursday.

The controversy is over a 3.77-acre parcel of federally-owned waterfront land at Seaview Terrace in Victoria West which the city wants to rezone from garden apartments to single-family-dwelling.

Because of a constitutional complication, which makes it appear that the city may not have the authority to rezone federal land, council decided Thursday to postpone further rezoning proceedings until the crown has sold the property.

The city instead served notice that it may rezone the property in question after it has been purchased from the federal government for its high-density development potential.

A rezoning to single-family dwelling would rule out the possibility of building an apartment block on the land.

Anyone buying the land under the circumstances would take a chance of having to fight the city in the courts. "He'd be buying a pig in a poke," as one city official put it.

The controversy began in October, 1970 when the federal Crown Assets Disposal Corp. told the city that a prospective agreement with a Victoria developer for sale of the land had fallen through.

Diamond Developments Ltd., the firm in question, was to have paid $253,000 for the land but couldn't meet the terms of an option it had previously taken out.

Ottawa then offered the land to the city for $185,000 but the city wasn't interested.

Crown Assets said it would readvertise the land for sale, which it apparently never did.

Sometime last year, the land was again offered to the city, this time for $165,000 but the city wanted it for nothing. When Ottawa indicated it wouldn't give away the land, the city started rezoning proceedings to discourage property speculation.

Two weeks ago, the city was told that agreement had been reached between the federal government and Diamond Developments for purchase of the property.

Thursday's decision to wait until the land has been sold was reached after council had met for 30 minutes behind closed doors.

The in-camera meeting was preceded by a lively public hearing which lasted more than an hour.

George Carruthers, a Vancouver lawyer acting on behalf of Crown Assets, told the hearing the city has no authority to zone federal land.

He told council that federal land had no zoning classification.

This prompted council to include reference to "constitutional problems" in its motion.

It was pointed out to Carruthers that the city rezoned the land two years ago from commercial to garden apartments. If the city has no zoning authority, then that rezoning would be invalid.

Carruthers agreed this was so. He also agreed that the city could zone it any way it liked once it was sold. It then would become a matter between the purchaser and the city.

Victoria lawyer John Hutchison, acting on behalf of Diamond Developments, told the hearing the property was zoned for garden apartments and his client wanted to buy it in the anticipation of building garden apartments.

Any attempt on the part of the city to rezone the land to residential, he said, would be "struck down by the courts" on the grounds that it would be regarded as "colorable and discriminatory legislation."

Jim Gorst of 3944 Wilkinson Road appeared before the hearing on behalf of the New Democratic Party. He spoke in support of the rezoning proposal calling it sensible legislation aimed at "creating good living conditions" in Victoria.

He would pursue the matter "to the utmost, demanding answers from government officials" with regard to the negotiations with the developer, which at one time were said to have broken off but were renewed after the developer's option had lapsed and without any readvertising.

A letter from a local representative of the Communist Party of Canada was also in support of the proposed rezoning.

Joe Richards of 901 Esquimalt Road, unsuccessful aldermanic candidate in last December's civic elections, told the hearing the property should be developed into a marina. He called on council "to take a stand now."

Some at William Head Ready to Quit

Bilingual Flashes Aggravate Guards

By DON COLLINS
Colonist Reporter

Objections to new bilingual shoulder flashes are so strong among some William Head guards that at least one or two may quit the job if ordered to wear them, the Colonist was told Thursday.

The order from the solicitor-general's department applies to all federal prison guards and is to take effect today.

William Head is a minimum security prison with some 45 guards comprising a local of the Public Service Alliance of Canada.

Members of the same union have been fighting the order elsewhere.

The most definite steps appear to have been taken by about 250 guards at the B.C. Penitentiary in New Westminster, who have voted to support any member who refuses to wear the patches.

Reports indicate English-speaking guards at federal prisons look on the bilingual flashes as a step in a plan by Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer to give penitentiary service a basic French-Canadian flavor.

Staff members at Ontario's Joyceville Penitentiary were reported to have sent telegrams earlier to other English-speaking members of the PSAC urging them to resist the order to wear the flashes.

Storm-centre at prison

James Clink, president of the New Westminster PSAC local, said he was sure some of the men at the penitentiary wouldn't wear the flashes. But he declined to say how many men this might involve.

The flashes have the words solliciteur general above the English solicitor general.

Bert Dodd, vice-president of the William Head local, said there was a mixed feeling among guards for and against the new flashes, but that some were so strongly opposed "they could resign if directed to follow the order."

Such action, however, would probably be confined to one or two guards, he said.

Dodd and local president George Sewell have sent a letter to Paul Gascon of Ottawa, secretary-treasurer of the union's solicitor-general component, asking him to make the solicitor-general aware of the feelings at William Head.

Sewell said the men at William Head hadn't cast any votes as those at New Westminster did.

"I haven't seen the men since Wednesday but the feeling then seemed to be that we should obey the order and see what can be done about it afterward," Sewell said.

The problem arises at a time when penitentiary staffs are busy adjusting to changes in prison policy, such as those modernizing the penal system by allowing prisoners leave of absence.

"We have enough to do with so may changes without having to get involved now with differences of opinion over shoulder flashes," Dodd said.

At Joyceville, where the objection was first raised, guards were reportedly ready now to obey the order.

"We're licked," admitted Wray McNeely, president of the Joyceville local.

Saanich Insurer Will Study Damage Claims

Damage claims from property-owners affected by the Dec. 8 floods in Saanich will be sent on to the municipality's insurer, administrator John Tribe said Thursday.

He said a citizen has the right to claim damages but the liability of the municipality or its insurer is another question.

"There are certain types of floods for which we (the corporation of Saanich) are not liable," said Tribe.

Approximately 350 complaints of flooding were received by the municipality during a downpour Dec. 8. Saanich's engineering department says about 44 per cent of the complaints have been traced to inadequate drainage of asphalted roads.

It also was disclosed at a meeting of municipal council's public works committee this week that the storm drainage construction program has lagged in the amount of $152,600 during the past four years.

Oak Bay Mayor Frances Elford said that council had received no opinion from Oak Bay's lawyer yet as to the municipality's liability with regards to claims for damage resulting from the same rainstorm.

She said, "It takes a long time. I imagine each individual claim will have differences. We've got to establish responsibility one way or the other."

At present six residents are suing the municipality for damages caused by basement flooding in their Henderson Road homes.

In a special report to council's Committee B Dec. 14, municipal engineer — planner Geoffrey White also pinpointed the cause of the flooding as being the municipality's inadequate drainage system, which had been "quite cheap."

Coroner's Jury Ruling in Wickens Fatality:

Death Caused by Sidney Driver

A coroner's jury ruled Thursday night that a Saanich woman's death was caused by a Sidney resident who drove his car through a red light on Pat Bay Highway.

And Edmond Jorre de St. Jorre, Victoria-area coroner since 1964, said afterward that the inquest into the Nov. 24 traffic death of Gail Wickens, 30, of 420 Brookleigh, had more sessions than he had ever handled at an inquest before — five in all.

Length of the inquest, which began Nov. 29, was largely caused by thorough cross-examination of witnesses by a battery of lawyers.

Evidence showed that a car driven southbound on Pat Bay Highway by Carl Turner, 56, of 10018 Siddall, Sidney, slammed into the left side of a car driven by Mrs. Wickens which had gone onto the highway in an easterly direction from Sayward in Saanich.

Mrs. Wicken's car was then thrown into a spin by the impact and collided with a third car stopped at a red light on the northbound lane of the highway. Inside the third car, an RCMP vehicle, was RCMP Assistant Commissioner Gordon Cunningham and his civilian chauffeur.

Turner, the coroner's jury had been told, was alone in his car while five young children were riding in the Wicken's car.

Two of the children remain in fair condition in St. Joseph's Hospital while a third is recovering from his injuries in the Queen Alexandra Solarium in Saanich. The other two were only slightly injured.

The jury ruled, after deliberating for about 45 minutes, that Mrs. Wickens died as a result of cuts to her lungs, bleeding in her lungs and a ruptured liver, spleen and left kidney. She was pronounced dead on arrival at Royal Jubilee Hospital about half an hour after the crash.

As a result of conflicting testimony given at a previous session, John Persona, of 3141 Yew, was recalled to the stand.

Evidence introduced by a Saanich policeman at the previous session indicated Persona had made a statement in which he said the car driven by Turner had passed him, heading for the accident intersection, and Persona had sounded his horn as a warning.

However, there were references during the inquest sessions to a language barrier between Persona and the policeman. Persona speaks English only haltingly.

Thursday night, Persona said he saw the result of the accident but didn't see it occur. He said he didn't recall any cars passing him and he didn't sound his horn before the crash.

Two-Acre Lot Limit Under Protest

By JIM BRAHAN
Colonist Reporter

A bid to nullify North Saanich's stop-work order against a Victoria developer clearing a 25-acre parcel of land will be heard in B.C. Supreme Court late this month.

Victoria lawyer M. D. W. Young, acting for developer A. S. Bains, said Thursday he hopes to have the hearing set for Jan. 25 in judges chambers.

Young said he will argue that the municipal council has exceeded its jurisdiction.

Tree clearing operation on Bains' 25-acre property at West Saanich and Land's End Road was stopped by council order on Jan. 4.

At its inaugural meeting Jan. 3, council decided the clearing was a contravention of the zoning bylaw under which the property was zoned as rural, with a minimum subdivision of two acres. Council described the clearing as a logging operation.

Young said Thursday that council's action was discriminatory.

"There is no apparent good reason for the stop-work order issued by the council. It is discriminating against an individual property owner because there is evidence of other properties being cleared in the municipality without any objection."

A small amount of clearing has been done on a 155-acre site adjacent to Bains' property owned by Harold Lineham, 1150 Richardson.

Lineham said that he was very interested in council's action over the Bains' property.

"I have been paying taxes on that acreage of mine for 61 years and when it comes time I want to be able to subdivide and get some of my tax money back.

"In the last three years my taxes have gone up from $660 to $3,300. I pay the taxes and council tries to tell me what I can do with the property," he said.

Lineham said he started to carve out Land's End Road more than 35 years ago.

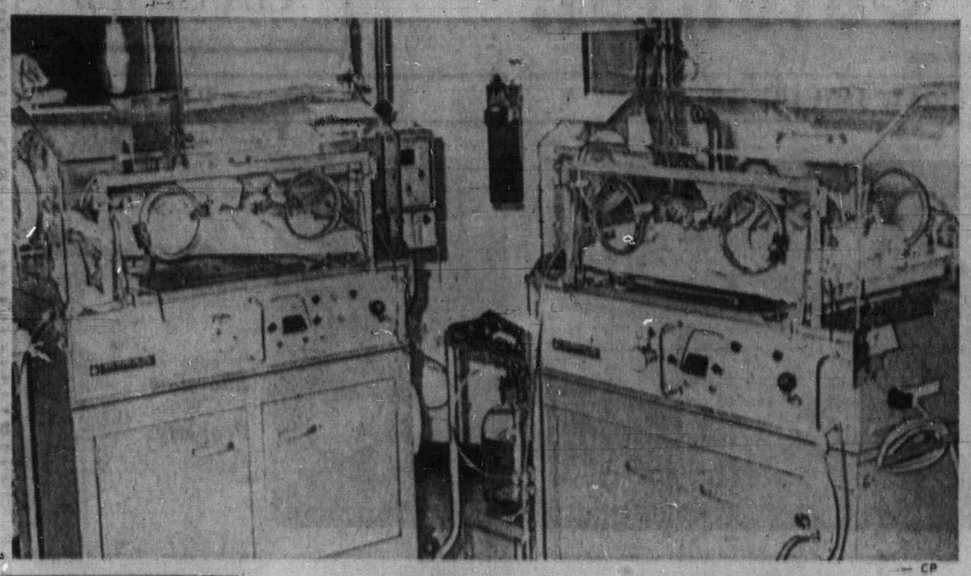

"I hired a man with a horse and a big scoop. That's how that road was started during the hungry 30s."

He slammed the two-acre property zoning.

"Who wants to buy a two-acre chunk of property when all they want to do is build a house on it . . . what are they supposed to do with the rest of the land?" he asked.

He claimed that council doesn't know what it is doing.

"Its getting more like Russia every day when they can tell you what you can do or can't do with your own property."

Temporary Home for Twins

Incubators will be home for next two weeks for Cynthia and Christine, Siamese twin girls separated in a 2½-hour operation Sunday in Edmonton. Sisters are reported progressing satisfactorily and took first oral feeding since operation Wednesday.

Orchids Add To Occasion

Dorothy Wrotnowski

It was orchids for the ladies at the Chamber of Commerce secretaries' luncheon at the Empress Wednesday.

They were specially flown in by Jim Mutch of CP Air as a sort of farewell gesture. Jim, a popular chamber member, has been transferred to Hawaii and leaves for the sunny isles at the end of the month.

Jim, naturally, is looking forward to his new appointment but he is pretty sad about leaving his favorite fishing waters at Oak Bay.

During what is called the social hour was talking to Mike Page who was taking a lot of good natured needling over his week-old stubble. I'm sure this will grow into a noble beard but as Mike says "right now it feels downright scruffy."

One Goof

Then I pulled one of my better boo-boos. These absent-minded moments can be quite frequent at times.

Mike had told me that Helen Beirnes had wanted me to sit at her table, and then when talking to Helen she also mentioned this. And of course I accepted.

Time to go into lunch and past president Brian Small came over to me and said, "Come on Dorothy, I'll show you to your table, we want you to sit with the president."

I cringe when I think of my reply which was, "I'm sorry, Brian, but I have promised to sit with Helen." A look of such utter incredulity passed over his face that it immediately registered that of course Helen is the president.

'Looks Bad'

"You'd better not let that one out," says Helen; "if I have been president for six months and the press doesn't know — it looks pretty bad."

Others at the table with president Helen were Barry Bowman, Kathy Doidge, Ron Way and Peter Chipman.

Barry acted as master of ceremonies and with mike in hand strolled around the ballroom talking to people in his inimitable witty style. This certainly made for a friendly, warm atmosphere. But then Chamber of Commerce affairs were always like that.

When Barry returned to the table he looked at his plate and exclaimed in wonder, "ham slices and raisin sauce. I'm so used to roast beef and Yorkshire pudding at Empress Chamber lunches that this is a shock. Even when my wife cooks roast beef and Yorkshire pudding at home I feel as if I should stand and say a few words before I sit down."

Dinner, Dress

After lunch Barry again distributed prizes with the lucky tickets being drawn by Kathie Doidge. There were two Barney's Pool prizes of $50 each, numerous CP flight bags, a dinner for two at the Empress, a Carnaby Street dress, wigs, six two-wine-bottle parcels and two transistor radios.

Barry had to borrow glasses to read the small print of the transistor donors — CJVI. Good-natured laughter greeted Dan Cotter when he won the two-month complete hair care at Churly Morn donated by owner, Warren Reagon. Dan is taking Jim Mutch's place as manager of CP Air, and to be kind, let's say he is a little thin on top.

A fashion show by Carnaby Street followed on the fast-moving agenda. Helen commentated the show, and her first words "Fashion does its own thing this year," are certainly true.

And you have a choice of being booted or barefoot. There were some terribly smart high boots, one worn with a short outfit reaching above the knee. The footwear was from the villager.

Long Robes

Fashions from Carnaby are imported from all over the world and many of those shown were from Mexico. It appears fashions vary from the huge bat-winged free flowing, long robes to the long sleek look. There were a few eye-catching "see through" models, one featuring wide lace panels down back and front, and another demure voile model didn't leave much to the imagination.

There was a noticeable lack of pantsuits but one outfit that drew a lot of applause was jet-black velvet, the poncho top outlined with a narrow band of white fur. Another striking model in black was decidedly of Mexican flavor, the long flowing cape featuring a smaller shoulder cape. This was worn with a straight-brimmed black hat.

Leather and suede made up several models from Mexico.

Male Model

Nigel Goode, the brave lone male model, showed a smart outfit of slim leather pants topped with a colorful shirt with great swinging sleeves. He also wore slim pants of purple crushed velvet topped with a white Mexican shirt featuring deep sleeves.

A bridal dress from Mexico was white cotton, finely tucked skirt, lots of lace insertion and was banded at the waist in red.

Janice Bontell and Bev Grooms of Carnaby Street co-ordinated the show, and other models were Penny Moyes, Cindy Connley, Ceredwyn Richards and Price Thomson.

'Getting Away' Has Hazards

TORONTO (CP) — Want to know how to survive in the bush? Or what to do when your plane crashes in the desert?

These are just a couple of aspects of a course on survival, one of the 130 night courses being offered this winter at Humber Community College in suburban Rexdale.

Pat Gore, head of the journalism department of Humber, is a former Royal Marine commando and an expert on survival.

He is conducting the course because, he says, survival training is becoming more important as Canadians increasingly take vacations in the open air.

"There are thousands and thousands of Canadians trying to get away from the cities on snowmobiles, in light aircraft, in canoes or larger craft and by backpacking through hundreds of square miles of national parkland," he says.

"And not all know enough to survive in the bush if they run into trouble.

"But what really got me thinking about a survival courage was after a young woman motorist died of exposure just two miles from the Humer campus last winter.

"She would have lived had she known even elementary survival rules."

In addition to commando training, Gore served with a resuce team in Wales and has travelled in Finnish Lapland and the Negev desert in Israel. He also is an experienced mountaineer.

He says his course comprises lectures and field work on bush, winter and desert survival, first aid, fires, map-reading, navigation, maintaining morale and equipment use.

Togetherness Aids Students

SWANSEA, Wales (CP) — Co-education can mean better results at university, says a college professor in Glamorganshire. More than 400 students were questioned in a survey by Prof. Reginald Dale who found that "in most cases, those with co-educational backgrounds progress much faster with their studies than those from single-sex schools."

Dale added that "students suddenly introduced to the opposite sex at the age of 18 are bound to be distracted for quite some time."

Ann Landers

Dear Ann Landers: I have never seen this problem in your column. Will you please deal with it? It's becoming a serious threat to many middle-age marriages. I refer to the sexual conduct of teen-age children.

The daughter of a close friend (age 17) was entertaining her boy-friend in her parents' bedroom a few weeks ago and I do mean entertaining. The folks came home unexpectedly and a scene followed. The mother was furious and made it plain that she was shocked, disappointed and outraged. The father took the daughter's side — said sex was normal and natural, and so long as she didn't get pregnant he saw nothing wrong with it. The argument didn't end there. They fought about this for two months and finally the mother filed for divorce.

Another case involves my cousin. The reverse happened. Their 18-year-old son told his parents he wanted them to allow his 17-year-old girl friend to move into their house. Her parents had thrown her out (for reasons he did not care to discuss) and he had a nice big bedroom, so why not?

The father said, "Over my dead body." The mother said, "Yes. We'll take her in. It would be the 'Christian' thing to do." Three weeks later the father moved out. Last week he filed for a legal separation. There are two younger children involved, and I view this as a tragedy.

Isn't life difficult enough these days without kids creating additional heartache for their parents? Please, Ann, tell your readers how this problem should be dealt with. Thank you. — Saddened By It All.

Dear Sad: Children learn early the technique of "divide and conquer." A teen-ager who could have created such a wedge between his parents is no novice and has had plenty of practice. Parents should stand united, especially on matters of morality and discipline. If they cannot agree they should seek counselling and permit a third party to decide which way to go and BOTH should go in that direction.

Your letter gives me an opportunity to say something else to parents whose teen-agers come up with such "requests." Kids don't always want everything they ask for. Sometimes they are relieved when the answer is no.

Ladies' Day Out

Learn A Little, Laugh A Lot

By NANCY BROWN
Colonist Reporter

For some it's pure escapism — a chance to get out of the house and away from small children for a few hours.

For others it's a chance to make friends in a strange city, while some are interested only in what they will be getting out of the day.

At all events it's Tuesday at 10:30 a.m. and time for Ladies' Day Out at the YM-YWCA.

The women who assemble in the gymnasium at that hour come in all shapes, sizes and age groups.

Some are young women in their early 20s, agile as high school girls, others are older women (some in their 60s) surprisingly able to cope with the rhythmic exercises which continue for well over the allotted 30 minutes.

Then it's time for a swim — relaxing or strenuous depending upon the temperament of the swimmer — lunch and an hour of handicrafts or similar activity.

Many women taking the course are new in town and have joined hoping to find friends with similar interests.

"I didn't know anyone at all in Victoria when I first came here," Pat Sinnott said. "Here I can meet all kinds of people."

She holds a general membership in the Y so that she can take any courses that are going.

"I like this program because it's strenuous for me, and I like a real good workout, and also because of the kindergarten for the children.

"It's really great to get away from children for a while, especially when they are getting something out of it as well."

It has been decided tentatively to arrange at least one session for the mothers and their children in the gymnasium, giving them a joint exercise program.

The children also get a short session on their own in the gymnasium.

Another woman was there to lose weight.

At 66 she had joined the Silver Threads Keep Fit program but found it too easy.

"My husband gave me a Y membership for a Christmas present," she said.

Another was there simply to get out of the house.

"If you're cooped up all day with young children, I don't care how big the house is, the walls start closing in," she said. "You get kind of hushed, too, if you have no one to talk to except young children."

So there she is bending and stretching with the rest of the clients.

Tea and coffee are served in the upstairs lounge at lunch time as most of the women have sandwiches with them.

The conversation starts with mutual interests, with family and friends, and raising the children. It drifts on to politics and world affairs and back to local affairs before it's time for the handicrafts program.

Tuesday afternoon hostess Nancy McLaren was giving a lesson in tye dyeing.

This was no sit back and watch program; each woman had material or clothing to conduct her experiments on.

As various dyes steamed on hotplates the hilarity grew amongst the experimenters.

"I've often wanted to do this," laughed one, "but who wants to go through all this in the kitchen all alone.

"Here we can do what we like with someone to help us along. We learn a little, and we laugh a lot."

And that's the way it goes on Ladies' Day Out.

They learn a little, laugh a lot and declare it exhausting fun.

Death Need Not Frighten Children

'Oh No, This Can't Happen to Me'

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The little girl with acute leukemia trundled through her area of the hospital asking grownups a single question.

"What's it going to be like when I die?"

The only real response she received was that adults were afraid to talk about dying.

When she put the question to the hospital chaplain, he asked what she thought it would be like.

"One of these days I'm going to fall asleep and when I wake up I'm going to be with Jesus and my little sister," she said, and returned to play.

Dr. Elisabeth Kubler Ross, writing in the National Education Association Journal, said the story shows that children can face up even to their own deaths if adults "don't make it a frightening, horrible experience to be avoided at all costs."

She and a number of her colleagues at the University of Chicago's Billings Hospital interviewed and followed the cases of about 500 terminally ill patients in the hope of learning how to be more helpful to them and their families.

While children can accept the idea of death, she said, adults send the elderly to nursing homes and the fatally ill to hospitals which usually forbid children to visit them, even if they are parents.

Most patients, when told their illness is fatal, respond in shock: "Oh no, this can't happen to me." When they learn to accept their plight, Dr. Ross said, they display envy, jealousy and anger against their attendants, clergymen and families.

The patients are not really angry at the individuals, she said, but rather at the health and energy they represent. Once this stage is passed, many pray for a compromise — one more year of life.

When the patient stops demanding "Why me?" and substitutes the acknowledgment, "Yes, me," deep depression usually follows, Dr. Ross said. She warned that at this time the patient never should be told to "cheer up."

"We should allow them to grieve, to cry," she said. "We should even convey to them that 'It takes a brave person to cry,' meaning that it takes courage to face death."

When the patient acknowledges his impending death, he often wants only one deeply loved person nearby, and shows no more fear, bitterness or anguish.

"The tragedy is that in our death-denying society, people grow up uncomfortable in the presence of a dying patient, unable to talk to the terminally ill, and lost for words when they face a grieving person," she said.

Dr. Ross said brothers and sisters of dying children need special care. They often are left alone because their parents want to be with their dying child.

"The tragedy is that these children at home not only are anxious, lonely and frightened at the thought of their sibling's death," she said. "They also feel that somehow their wish for a brother or sister to 'Drop dead,' which all children have at times, is being fulfilled . . . they feel responsible for the death."

The surviving children need immediate, compassionate help, Dr. Ross said.

"If we help our children to face fear and show them that through strength and sharing we can overcome even the fear of dying, then they will be better prepared to face any kind of crisis that might confront them, including the ultimate reality of death," she said.

New Manual May Help Unwed Mother Survive

TORONTO (CP) — A "survival" manual for the many unwed mothers who today are keeping their children is being produced by the Ontario Association of Children's Aid Societies.

The booklets will be sold for 10 cents each to the association's 57 member societies in the expectation they will be distributed to schools, clinics and doctors' offices.

The book was advertised in the December issue of the association Journal as A Handbook for Unmarried Parents, a Survival Manual.

One teenager already has written in, enclosing 10 cents and saying although she is unmarried she is keeping her child "and I want to survive."

The booklet, written by the association's information officer, Ruth Doehler, warns against rushing into marriage because of pregnancy and weighs the pitfalls and benefits of having the child raised by the girl's parents.

"A forced marriage can be a kind of prison for both partners," she writes. "Children raised in such a prison are not happy."

She says a girl may find it convenient to work, live at home and have her parents raise the child.

The emphasis is on the fact that the CAS can help with advice about prenatal care, nutrition, applying for financial help arranging temporary foster care while the mother finds a place to live, and a foster home.

Mrs. Doehler says the booklet tries to dispel the belief that CAS shouldn't be approached unless the mother intends to give up her child.

It lists ways the CAS can help such as discussing the rights and obligations of the father; what to tell the child about his birth as he grows older and how to cope with illegitimacy in the face of landlords, employers and schools.

Truffles Hit

FRANCE (Reuter) — Snow has hampered the harvesting of truffles here and forced the price up to a record $24 a pound. This southeast district is famous for the rare delicacy.

'Love Aids' Boom

TORONTO (CP) — Business is booming in Toronto's first sex shop, with its entire stock of "love aids" already sold out.

Mary Sutherland, one of two women running Lovecraft Ltd. which opened last weekend, said this week its early success proves "Torontonians are normal people with a lively interest in sex."

Mrs. Sutherland, 36, said her products — mostly purchased from the Orient, Germany and England — are "intended to help couples reach greater mutual satisfaction and enjoyment from their sexual relations."

Science on Display

The science of meteorology is on display at the Provincial Museum on Belleville until the end of February, Victoria head forecaster Allan McQuarrie said Monday.

The display, developed last year to commemorate the 100th birthday of the Canadian Meteorological Service (now Atmospheric Environment Service), was one of number of exhibits displayed cross the country.

Featuring modern and antique instruments, the display was shown in several Interior cities, at the Abbotsford Air Show, and during the early part of the winter travelled to Lower Mainland points.

Many of the modern instruments are operating, and visitors to the display in the entrance hall of the museum will be able to see how the weather is measured.

Provincial COURT

There are all kinds of situations these days where people have to stand in line or go back later for service and anyone who punches out somebody else every time he has to wait is "going to have a pretty miserable time of it."

That's what Judge William Ostler said Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to James Owen Marsh, 33, of 3960 Saanich, who pleaded guilty to a charge of assault causing bodily harm Dec. 10 at the motor vehicle testing station in Saanich.

Prosecutor John Macintyre said Marsh's car had been rejected twice because of noisy mufflers. When he took it back Dec. 10 for a third check, it was rejected again and Marsh punched attendant Donald Chaplin in the nose, knocking him down and causing minor injuries.

Marsh, who had to be restrained from hitting Chaplin more than once, told court he had shown Chaplin a receipt for work done but that still wasn't enough. Ostler fined Marsh $50.

Penny For Your Thoughts

In warmer months Oak Bay's Sealand of the Pacific is jammed every daylight hour as trainers put killer whale Haida and his girlfriend Chimo —only white killer whale in captivity and currently out for lunch — through their paces. During winter, although whales still practise, there's time for other activities. Thursday, Rusty Copeland, 2467 Selwyn, introduced Haida to six-month-old seal named Penny.

'B.C. Police Just Thorough'

Attorney-General Doubts National Crime Statistics

Would you sooner walk the streets of Edmonton by night than Montreal or Quebec City, Attorney-General Leslie Peterson would. And he says so in the face of a statistics report that listed Edmonton as having the highest per capita crime rate of 12 major cities in 1970. Quebec was at the bottom of the poll with Montreal next lowest.

Peterson doesn't place much faith in the validity of the statistics which also present B.C. as the province with the highest crime rate in 1970.

It's all a matter of one area being more thorough than another in the reporting of crimes, he believes. And B.C. is one case in point.

B.C. is policed largely by the RCMP, a body that reports all offences, Peterson said in an interview Thursday.

Assistant RCMP Commissioner G. C. Cunningham said Wednesday B.C.'s high rate of tourism might be a contributing factor in the high rate of crime in the province.

Cunningham said that "to put my finger on any specific reasons would be impossible without a detailed analysis."

Asked whether his force had sufficient manpower, he said "we're busy . . . but I don't know a police force in North America that doesn't consider itself understaffed."

Peterson said every branch of the Criminal Code is listed, something that shows well for the work of the police of the province, "but gives us bad publicity in the fact it shows we have the highest crime rate — which I question."

Regardless of the report's accuracy, Peterson says the statistics do show law enforcement must be treated as a "top priority" by government and society.

He called on the public to support police in every way possible. An increase in the number of policemen is also necessary, he said.

In expressing his doubt about the validity of the statistics, Peterson said:

"It shows Edmonton with the highest crime rate in the nation. Where would you sooner walk at night, in the city of Edmonton or in Montreal and Quebec which according to these statistics are the lowest. I must say there's no way you can convince me that this is a true statement of fact."

Edmonton's rate was reported at 9,868.8 offences per 100,000 inhabitants. Quebec's was at 4,197.7 and Montreal's 4,922.8.

In leading the provinces, B.C. reported 9,362.9 offences per 100,000 citizens.

Peterson agreed with the feeling of some police officials that B.C.'s rate may have been affected somewhat by the heavy flow of transients from outside the province.

'Jailbird' Status Avoided

"I'm sorry if you've had a rough time of it," Judge William Ostler said Thursday in Victoria Provincial Court to a negative young man, "but I'm not going to be part of making a jailbird out of you."

The young man, Donald Francis Magee, 21, no fixed address, pleaded guilty to a charge of obtaining food by fraud and prosecutor John Macintyre said Magee ran up a $4.90 bill Wednesday evening at Barney's Hideaway, 919 Douglas, then wrote on the back of the bill: "Sorry, no money."

What's more, Magee told police that he wanted to be arrested—he didn't have any place to stay except jail.

Ostler asked Magee: "Are you content to let other people plan your life for you?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

Didn't Magee have any plans, any prospects, any interest in anything? "No, sir," was the reply.

"You don't want to just stay in jail, do you?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

Magee said he left Montreal last November and didn't want to go back to his family there. He came straight to B.C. and arrived in Victoria this week. He had never tried to get on welfare or get help from anyone.

"Where do you want to live?" asked Ostler.

"Nowhere, really," said Magee.

The judge expressed concern over the "curious mental processes" of Magee, then said: "I've never met such a negative young man . . . I don't feel disposed to grant him his wish to go to jail. It's masochistic. It's too absurd."

One of the reasons he was ruling out jail, said the judge, was that Magee had to "face up to life" sometime.

"I hope your attitude of depression is one that will go away," he told Magee. "I realize it's hard to get a job but your attitude is no help. I can't believe spending time in jail is what you want. I'm going to let you go. You are entitled to sustenance and I advise you to go to a welfare agency."

Ostler sentenced Magee to a nominal one-day jail term and warned him he might really have to go to jail if he kept up his "negative" behavior.

Must Hunting Course Pledged

By ALEC MERRIMAN
Colonist Outdoors Editor

B.C. Wildlife Federation directors met with Recreation Minister Kiernan Thursday and secured a commitment that a provincial government-operated hunter training program will become compulsory this year for most new hunters.

Federation managing director Geoff Warden said that originally sportsmen, through the federation, had requested training for novice hunters — and not simply a written test.

He said Kiernan now has instructed the fish and wildlife branch to again work out a training program that will require anyone getting his first hunting licence in B.C. to complete a compulsory training course and pass both written and oral examinations.

But the new course will not be as comprehensive as the hunter training and conservation program, which is in use by the provincial department and was originally scheduled as a compulsory 10-week, 20-hour course.

Last month, when objections were voiced about the compulsory aspects of such a complete course, wildlife branch officials said the course was being rewritten and published in book form like the driver's examination manuals, and licence applicants would have to only write an examination.

Kiernan apparently has again changed the rules on the insistence of wildlife federation directors.

"The current comprehensive course dealing with many things not directly pertinent to hunting will still be made available to anyone who wants it but the compulsory aspect will be restricted to things directly connected with hunting," Warden said.

He envisaged a three-lesson course to include such things as gun safety, wildlife identification, hunting regulations and sportsmanship.

He said that merely passing a written examination would not establish a new hunter as knowing how to handle firearms properly or as having any rael knowlege of what hunting is all about.

"Proper use of firearms, conservation and hunting ethics can only come through personal instruction."

Saanich Shows 55 So Far

Assessment Appeals Down

The Saanich assessor's department so far has received complaints from 55 taxpayers about their 1972 assessment notices, it was learned Thursday. The total is down almost 50 per cent from last year.

William Craven, municipal assessor, said 46 of the complaints, which are in the form of notices of appeal, are from property-owners in Greater Victoria school district and nine are from Saanich school district.

There were 109 such appeals last year.

The deadline for notices of appeal is 5 p.m. Monday. They must be received at municipal hall by that time in order to be heard by the court of revision.

The court, whose members are appointed by the provincial cabinet, will sit in February.

The Saanich assessor's department has revised the assessments of properties in several areas of Saanich. The revisions, together with new construction during the past year, bring the general purpose assessment to $130 million on improvements and $48.8 million on land.

The total assessed value of improvements increased $8.9 million last year.

The assessed value of improvements and land is the base to which the taxation mill rate, to be set later by municipal council and school boards, is applied.

Spring Flooding Chance Too Early To Predict

The water content of the interior B.C. snow pack is far above average, the chief of the provincial hydrology division, Harry Hunter, reported Thursday.

But he said it is too early to predict spring floods. Sudden hot weather would overflow streams but a cool spring would bring a longer, orderly run-off.

Heaviest snowpack was reported on Blackwell Peak in Manning Park, on the Hope-Princeton highway. More than six feet of snow was on the ground, with a water equivalent of 21.2 inches, compared with a four-year average of 14.6 inches.

BEALES — In loving memory of our Mother, Mrs. Janet Craig Beals, who passed away January 14, 1971.
There are lots of mothers in this world, we know,
But she was ours, and we loved her so.
If she could have spoken before she died,
These are the words she would have replied.
"Weep not for me, nor sorrow take,
But love one another for my sake."
—Lovingly remembered by her husband Ted, daughters Agnes and Josephine.

SAXBY — In loving memory of my late husband and a loving father Sgt. (S) Thomas Mayard Saxby, who was suddenly taken from us Jan. 14, 1971. He leaves us with fondest memories which we will never forget, we love him and miss him very much.

The U.S. Federal Communications Commission has backed down on a ruling which indicated virtually every TV commercial might be considered controversial and therefore the station showing it should give equal time to opposing views.

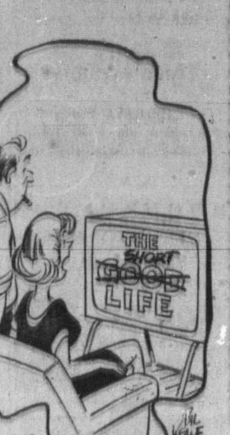

The FCC's ruling involved Esso commercials, shown on NBC, about the need to develop oil reserves rapidly through construction of a pipeline from Alaska. Groups called The Wilderness Society and Friends of the Earth asked for equal time to show the pipeline's ecological effects.

But the FCC said NBC handled the issue fairly by showing both sides of the matter in news and public affairs programs. Had it done otherwise, the FCC could have started a snowball that could have turned into an avalanche wiping all commercials off the air.

BUREAU OF USELESS INFORMATION: Thursday's answer — Two brief movie plots were about a status seeker stomping on everyone to get to the top (Room at the Top) and a young model climbing from bed to bed to get to the top (Darling) with both finding nothing there.

Today's question — Another brief movie plot: Ambitious actress intrigues her way past the queen of Hollywood only to find her own day as queen may be a short time. This time I want the name of the movie and the names of the actresses playing both Miss Ambition and the queen. Answers Saturday.

"It's been cancelled."

Friday Highlights

● C-6:30 p.m.—Several people phoned in November when PBS failed to show a scheduled concert by Arthur Fiedler and the World Symphony Orchestra. It will be seen today; music by Wagner and Respighi—9.

C-7:00—New time for The Avengers—7.

C-7:30—Premiere of The Don Rickles Show, a mid-season situation comedy starring the insult comic as an adman who's angry at everything—8.

C-8:00—A new Hart Michaels and Lorne Pomerantz comedy special—2, 6.

● C-8:00—Debut of Sanford and Son, with black comics Redd Foxx and Desmond Wilson as junkstore owners. It's a copy of England's Steptoe and Son junkmen and is recommended because it might succeed as an attempt to imitate All in the Family—5.

● 8:30—Film Odyssey begins (see the movie schedule below)—9.

C-9:00—The American Guild of Variety Artists hands out Entertainer of the Year awards to such as Barbra Streisand, Carol Burnett, Flip Wilson, Lily Tomlin and Jack Benny—7.

C-10:30—Again, Don Rickles—7.

Friday Movies

9:30 a.m.—The Strip (1957 Mickey Rooney drama). Rooney often makes unexpectedly good films but this isn't one of them—4.

12:45 noon—March Hare (1956 English comedy, not bad), Cyril Cusack, Peggy Cummins. Why mad as a March hare? Why not an October Ocelot?—6, 8.

4:00 p.m.—The Looters (1957 nothing), Rory Calhoun—7.

5:30—Marked Men (1940 ditto)—13.

C-8:00—An Eye for an Eye (1966 vengeance western, violent but fairly good), Robert Pansing, Pat Wayne, Slim Pickens—8.

C-8:30—Seven Faces of Dr. Lao (amusing 1964 western comedy-fantasy). A one-man show for Tony Randall but the men can watch Barbara Eden—5.

● 8:30—Jules and Jim (excellent 1961 Truffaut drama), Jeanne Moreau, Oskar Werner. Film Odyssey starts with this dandy among 26 classic movies, mostly silents, it will show in the next 26 weeks—9.

8:30—The Payoff (1942 reporter fights crime). Just garbage—13.

C-9:00—Taras Bulba (terrible 1962 pagans), Yul Brynner, Tony Curtis—12.

11:00—Duke of the Navy (1942 rah-rah foofaw)—13.

C-11:05—World in His Arms (1952 sea sinker), Gregory Peck, Anthony Quinn. This is bad and most of what follows is worse—12.

C-12:00—An Eye for an Eye (see 8:00)—6.

Winning Contract

By HOWARD and BEE SCHENKEN

A fine declarer is always on the lookout for an extra chance, however small, of making the contract, while taking care, of course, not to relinquish the more obvious chances of making it.

Opening lead: Jack of ♡.

Suppose you are playing this hand and West leads a heart. Many players would probably decide they needed the club finesse, and would eventually go down as a result. But let's say you are made of sterner stuff.

Winning the heart with the ace, you determine to give yourself the slight extra chance that something be done ith the spades. Accordingly, you cash the ace of spades and then enter dummy by overtaking the seven of diamonds with the king.

Luckily enough, the six of diamonds appears from West, dummy's five thus becoming a valuable additional entry.

Crossing your fingers, you lead a low spade from dummy and ruff it with a high trump, hoping the king will fall. It doesn't — but something almost as good happens when you notice that East has contributed the J-10 on the two rounds of spades that you've played.

Can you see how to profit from the fall of the J-10 of spades to land your slam?

It's easy, of course. You lead the four of diamonds to dummy's five, play the queen of spades, and gaily throw your losing heart on it.

West wins with the king, but the nine of spades is now good and in the fullness of time your losing club goes on it. Thus the slender extra chance pays dividends, and you make the slam.

WATERVIEW HOME PLUS REVENUE MUST BE SOLD
My instructions are to sell! This fabulous piece of property must be seen to be appreciated. You are left in utter surprise when you enter what appears to be a small, ordinary home. Sitting close to the ground in front yet offering a 9 ft. basement that is finished and offering much the same view as enjoyed from the expansive windows in the upstairs living and dining room. There is no way I can put on paper all there is to offer in this 17 year old View Royal home. There is even a very good reason for the low asking price of $27,500.

Onions

The easy way to grow onions is to buy a bagful of onion sets in April and plant them in rows with their noses just sticking through the soil surface.

The only disadvantage in this method is you don't have much choice as to variety. You can buy Yellow Dutch sets and Multipliers, and a few firms offer White Dutch, which is a strain of Ebenezer, but nothing in the way of those big sweet Spanish or Bermuda or Red Italian Torpedo onions, nor any of the new and exciting hybrid varieties.

If you want to have a go at growing these, you'll have to grow them from seed. And because of certain peculiarities in the life cycle of the onion plant, the sooner these seeds are sown, the better.

The onion passes through three definite stages in the development of its bulb from seed, and the first is the germination of the seed. Considerable warmth is needed, ideally around 75 degrees for quick and vigorous germination, after which the young seedlings should be grown on under much cooler conditions but with plenty of sunshine.

Next comes the bulbing stage, when the base of the plant begins to swell to produce the onion proper. During this period, no more leaves are produced, and the whole energy of the plant is thrown into the plumping up of the bulb.

Until fairly recent years, nobody knew just what set of conditions was required to turn an onion's attention from producing foliage to making a bulb. A series of painstaking experiments has disclosed the secret: Length of day is the factor responsible for triggering this action.

With most varieties of onions, bulbing starts when the plants are exposed to about 15 hours of daylight per day. In our part of the world, a day-length of 16 hours is reached in June.

The last stage is ripening. This is indicated by the weakening and falling over of the tops and the gradual drying up and contracting of the scales at the neck of the bulb. Sometimes, for one reason or another, this contracting at the neck doesn't occur; such thick-necked onions are not good keepers and should always be sent to the kitchen for immediate use rather than placed in winter storage.

Getting back to the day-length business, the point I want to make is this: If you want big, firm onions, the whole trick is to make sure your plants have lots of big, healthy leaves by the time the 16-hour day arrives to induce bulbing.

Onions are dirty feeders and need the richest, most heavily manured ground in the garden, but none of this rich stuff in the soil does any good at all until it has been converted into complex nutrients within the tissues of the leaves. As I have pointed out before, the leaves are food factories, powered by sunlight, and it follows that the more healthy foliage you have on your onions, the more factories will be working to plump up your bulbs.

To get plenty of foliage by bulbing time in June, then, onions have to be given an early start. At our house, onion seeds are sown in late January, in squatty flower pots, using a soil-less mixture of peat moss and vermiculite. The pots sit on top of our oil furnace, pleasantly warm to the touch and providing a little extra heat from below to hasten germination.

As soon as the seedlings come through, the pots are moved to a sunny but cool window, and when all the small plants have passed through the hairpin stage and are standing upright they are transplanted into flats filled with rich, sandy loam soil. After a hardening-off period in a coldframe, the plants are set out in the open ground, usually in late March or early April.

Jack Smith

Star Ends Suspense

Olivia de Havilland, who for years has been living in France, called me on the long distance telephone the other day. She wanted me to know how The Light in the Piazza turned out.

I had written of watching the first five minutes of that old movie on TV, only to turn it off when my wife came home. I was afraid she'd want to watch it through instead of cooking dinner.

★ ★ ★

When I turned it off the plot had just begun to set. Miss de Havilland is in Italy with her nubile daughter, Yvette Mimieux, and they meet a nice Italian boy, George Hamilton, in the piazza.

Hamilton and Miss Mimieux fall in love, but Miss de Havilland is troubled, for she knows Miss Mimieux was kicked in the head by a pony as a child and has the mind of a 10-year-old. This is all right in a 10-year-old, but it won't do in Miss Mimieux.

I tried to put the storey out of my mind, but it wouldn't go away. From the TV log I found out that Rossano Brazzi and Barry Sullivan were also in it, but it didn't say what roles they played.

My guess was that Sullivan was Miss de Havilland's jealous husband, and Brazzi was either an Italian surgeon or an Italian psychiatrist, and wanted either to operate on Miss Mimieux or analyse her, meanwhile, no doubt, dallying with her mother. I had to find out.

I had decided to write Miss de Havilland in care of her hotel in Italy, hoping the letter would be forwarded, when the phone rang and the operator said it was a Miss de Havilland calling from La Costa.

Naturally I was delighted, but also puzzled. I couldn't place La Costa. It sounded more like Spain than France. It turned out Miss de Havilland was calling from La Costa, Calif.

★ ★ ★

"I'm down here at the spa," she said. "I've lost four pounds in one day. Isn't that marvelous!"

"Oh," I said, remembering the slender Olivia de Havilland I had first loved in Captain Blood.

She had put on 15 pounds, she explained, while working in a film for TV called The Scream.

"It was all right for the part, but for me it won't do. I play a mother again. Only this time, the situation is reversed. It's I who have the mental problem, and it's my son who's overprotective. Isn't that a scream?"

★ ★ ★

"Now," she went on, "I want to tell you how The Light in the Piazza ends. Rossano Brazzi is not a brain surgeon. He is the father of George Hamilton, which may surprise you."

It certainly did surprise me. I would have thought Hamilton's Italian accent would have been better, if he was a Brazzi.

"Barry Sullivan is my husband, as you guessed. He's a big cigarette manufacturer. He wants to put our daughter in a proper institution, so she can be cared for and he and I will then have more time for each other. He's madly in love with me."

But George Hamilton wants to marry Miss Mimieux, and his father, Brazzi, and the entire Brazzi family are for it.

"They're enchanted by her. They don't understand English very well. They don't realize, you see, that there's anything wrong with her. She's so sweet and childlike, which they find desirable in a woman. They're wild about her. Of course it turns out George Hamilton isn't too bright himself."

In the end, there is a big Italian wedding and everyone is happy.

I asked Miss de Havilland if there was anything between her and Brazzi in the story.

"We have a light flirtation. Very light. My husband is mad about me. That's Barry Sullivan. But everything turns out all right, and I highly recommend that you see the rest of the film."

"I'll watch for it in my log," I said.

★ ★ ★

"Yes. Do that. Please search the log. Really. Every morning you must search the log for The Light in the Piazza."

I suppose Miss de Havilland called merely out of courtesy, but I like to think of it myself as a very light flirtation. The hell with Barry Sullivan.

Twiggy in Demand

MARILYN BECK

They laughed when Twiggy was first announced as the Boyfriend lead. But now that that picture is in release and the super-slim actress has grabbed some super reviews, they're talking even bigger things for her — like the female lead in the movie version of Jesus Christ Superstar.

Don't laugh, they're really serious about Twiggy playing that biblical role, the fellows at Decca Records tip. Final casting, say representatives of that label which gave us the "Superstar" album, will depend on the final concept of the movie. But if plans jell to give it a today-pop feel, Twiggy's the gal you will probably be seeing on screen.

★ ★ ★

Gary Collins went along with director Barry Shear's request that Gary do his own stunt work in The Sixth Sense. At least he went along for the first week of production of that January 15-debuting ABC series. "He had me up 30 feet off the ground, hanging from a wire for a special effects shot," reports Gary. "Barry's funny. Most directors want the stunt men to do the risky work. He'd rather actors did it themselves." After suffering a sprained thumb and a bruised elbow, Gary let the network know, "No more! Let the stunt men earn their money! I'll stick to acting."

★ ★ ★

The last time I discussed the movie-making subject with Lou Adler he assured me his one experience as a film producer in the MGM-released Brewster McCloud was enough to cure him of that temptation ever again. Well, it looks as if Lou should have never said ever. Because he's right now reading scripts again, has got that movie-producing bug anew. But you can bet he won't be talking deals with Metro this time — not ever! He's joined the growing group of locals who've got a grudge with that lot and their creative-interference ways.

Sydney Harris

Killers 'Quiet Ones'

Invariably, when some young man is arrested for wantonly murdering a neighbor's child, or his girl friend, or some members of his family, everyone who knew him expresses incredulous surprise.

★ ★ ★

"He was such a quiet lad," they always say, "very polite and obliging. He never gave anyone any trouble at all. I can't believe it."

It's astonishing how psychologically imperceptive most people are about other personalities. They seem to have formed their impression of "killers" from lurid films or fiction, where the murderer has a wild look in his eye, or goes around sneering and tipping over baby-buggies.

About 75 per cent of all homicides are "private" — that is, committed not by a stranger but by some friend, acquaintance, or member of the family.

And, unless alcohol is involved, usually the perpetrator is someone who has always been quiet, restrained, and considerate.

What the French call crime passionnel — violence for emotional gratification, and not for gain — may be compared to a boiler explosion.

If the personality is repressed, if the steam has no escape valve to release the build-up of pressure, then the docile and courteous person may erupt in a frenzy of violence and commit some unspeakable crime that seems wholly "out of character."

The more that psychologists study the twin acts of homicide and suicide, the more they seem to resemble each other as mirror-acts. The homicide is projecting his suicidal impulses, just as the suicide is introjecting his murderous impulses.

It might almost be said, without too gross a violation of the facts, that the emotional murderer kills to avoid suicide, and the suicide kills himself to avoid murdering.

At any rate, the personality structure behind many, if not most, of such crimes, has a startling uniformity of behavior: mildness, tractability, seeming respect for others, regularity of habits and concealment of moods beneath a quiet exterior with a penchant for privacy. (Now, please, don't reverse this proposition absurdly: most people who are mild and tractable are not latent murderers, by any means.)

Surprisingly enough, statistics show that the majority of "juvenile delinquents" do not go on to adult crime, at least of a violent nature. These youngsters who act out their problems tend to work off their aggressions through the escape valve.

It is the ones who build up a full head of steam without finding a way to release it who surprise all their neighbors some fine spring morning.

British Go, Cleric Claims:

Some Allies Willing To Pay Malta More

VALETTA (UPI) — The Roman Catholic archbishop of Malta said Thursday night four of Britain's allies were prepared to pay more rent to the Maltese to keep British troops on the Mediterranean island. As he spoke, the last dependents of the troops were evacuated to England.

The British have been ordered by Maltese premier Dom Mintoff to vacate the one-time island fortress by midnight Saturday, ending 170 years of British presence on Malta.

Mintoff made the move after failing to gain a sizable increase in the amount of rent Britain pays to use the military bases on the island, situated 250 miles north of Libya and 125 miles south of Sicily.

British officials said the troops could not be ready to leave by the deadline and contended the rent had been paid until March 31.

The archbishop, Sir Michael Gonzi, said he will meet Mintoff Friday to outline the proposal to increase rental payments given to him by four North Atlantic Treaty Organization nations.

"There is a ray of hope, however small," the 86-year-old churchman said as he returned from a mission to Rome and London to determine if he could end the crisis. He did not identify the four NATO nations.

Britain and her allies have offered Malta $22.8 million annually for the rental fee, but Mintoff has demanded $43.2 million a year.

Gonzi said a settlement was possible provided both sides made concessions, thus implying that the NATO offer did not meet Mintoff's demands.

The archbishop met Pope Paul VI and British Prime Minister Edward Heath during his trip and said the talks with Heath were frank and "heated."

Meanwhile, more than 6,100 employees of the British armed forces in Malta were notified Thursday they may lose their jobs at any time because of the military pullout.

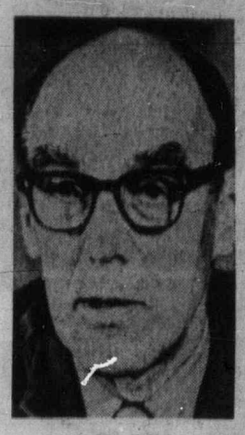

Stanfield Visit Long-Planned

* * *

Robert Stanfield, leader of the national Progressive Conservative Party, will be visiting Victoria Jan. 25, "but he isn't coming just to see me," Dr. Scott Wallace, who recently joined the Tories to become the B.C. party's first MLA in 17 years, said Thursday.

"This trip has been planned for a long time and he's going to see me along with a lot of other people in the party," Wallace said. While here Stanfield will be discussing reorganization of the B.C. party with Wallace and provincial party leader Derril Warren.

His trip to Victoria is part of a three-day visit to B.C., in which he will address the Vancouver Board of Trade Jan. 24 and, after visiting Victoria, attend a federal Conservative nomination meeting for Burnaby-Richmond Jan. 26.

Hong Kong Flu Bugs U.S. In Widespread Manner

ATLANTA, Ga. (AP) — Hong Kong flu is back on a widespread scale in the United States.

The disease killed 27,900 persons when it first made its appearance in the U.S. in 1968-69, the National Centre for Disease Control says.

The centre has attributed no deaths in the U.S. so far in the current outbreak.

The latest countrywide survey shows that Type A-2 flu, or Hong Kong flu, has been diagnosed in 22 states, the District of Columbia and New York City, which makes a separate report to the centre.

Most sections of the U.S. have some Hong Kong flu. In the Southeast, however, only Florida reports confirmed cases and these are scattered. No widespread outbreak has yet been reported in the Victoria area or the rest of Canada.

A spokesman for the centre noted that there are many viruses which are making the rounds with the flu bug.

"But if you just feel like hell, you've probably got the flu," a spokesman said.

Flying Pooch A Puzzler

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A three-judge superior court panel has taken under advisement the question of whether an airplane-piloting dog named Baron Von Red Dog can be considered an "unsafe load" when riding on the back of his master's motorcycle.

The dog's master, John Miller, 37, who told newsmen he sometimes lets the dog "take the controls of my airplane," was cited by the California Highway Patrol on June 26 for letting Baron Von Red Dog ride on the rear of his motorcycle on the freeway.

Appearing in Alhambra Municipal Court, Miller demanded a jury trial. The judge ruled the offence was not a crime but a traffic infraction — which, under California law, does not carry a guarantee of jury trial — and fined Miller $14.

In carrying his case to the superior court's appellate division Thursday, Miller argued that carrying the German Shepherd on the back of his motorcycle cannot be considered an unsafe load because the dog devised the carrying position — hind paws on the back carrier and front paws on Miller's shoulders. He implied the dog ought to know whether or not it was safe.

He also claimed a jury should have been allowed to decide whether the Shepherd was an unsafe load.

The prosecution submitted the case without oral argument.

Victorian Admits Guilt

LUMBY, B.C. (CP)— Jeffrey Robert Mitchell, 33, of 2524 Wark, Victoria, was remanded to Jan. 31 in Provincial Court in Lumby, east of Vernon, Thursday after pleading guilty to two drug charges.

He was charged in September after two RCMP officers seized a quantity of marijuana plants in a field near Mabel Lake, east of Vernon.

Smallwood makes announcement

'I'm Like a Boy Out of School'

Joey's Liberals Quit Next Week

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government will resign Monday or Tuesday to make way for Newfoundland's first Progressive Conservative administration since Confederation in 1949.

The 71-year-old premier, his voice slightly hoarse, announced the decision Thursday at a news conference in the cabinet room of the Confederation Building here.

The resignation comes more than two months after the Oct. 28 provincial election which saw the Conservatives under Frank Moores win 21 seats, the Liberals 20 and Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader returned in Labrador West.

Moores told a later news conference he was sorry Smallwood was not planning to meet him to discuss the changeover, but he paid tribute to the premier, who has said he plans to retire from politics Feb. 7.

Moores said forming a new government would not be an easy task and he hoped for co-operation from Liberal members of the 42-seat legislature.

"In the legislature, the Liberal opposition will offer the most sincere co-operation," Smallwood said after reading a prepared statement announcing the resignation.

"There will be an absence of obstructionism, an absence of filibustering."

Smallwood said the cabinet and the caucus had reaffirmed his promise of co-operation at meetings that preceded the announcement.

The government's resignation was brought about by a ruling of the Newfoundland Supreme Court Tuesday.

Two judges turned down a Liberal petition asking that the election of a Conservative in St. Barbe South riding be set aside on grounds that a recount could not be completed because 105 ballots were accidently burned.

The judges were unanimous

State Pollution Probers Seek Hearings in B.C.

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

● Olympia official calls for higher gas exports to U.S. Page 7

OLYMPIA, Wash — A Washington state legislative committee which is studying pollution problems along the international boundary wants to hold hearings in B.C. later this year.

The suggestion was made here Thursday by Thomas Swayze, speaker of the state House of Representatives, who also heads the executive committee of the state legislative council.

Swayze said his committee had taken advantage of the unique opportunity presented by the visit of the NDP caucus from B.C., to hold its first formal hearings in the course of the inquiry which will present its findings to the state legislature early in 1973

"We hope as part of this study to come up to visit with you, and continue this very interesting dialogue," Swayze told the visitors. "We don't know what will come of the study, perhaps nothing, perhaps very little, or perhaps we'll get some kind of joint control body.

'Too Early'

It's still too early to tell."

The study will deal with a variey of mutual water and air pollution problems ranging from the effects of the Roberts Bank superport and the Cherry Point refinery on nearby areas to the effects of the discharge of raw sewage from Greater Victoria on Olympic peninsula beaches.

The resolution, approved by the House of Representatives in Olympia at its 1971 session, called for the fullest possible co-operation in the study with state departments and agencies, the provincial government in B.C., municipalities on both sides of the border and Canadian and U.S. federal authorities.

Historic

Opposition Leader Dave Barret, who heads the group of NDP house members winding up two days of meetings with state legislators here, described the hearing as an historic occasion. He said he was proud to participate in a formal way in the first joint talks between Washington and B.C. on pollution problems.

He also promised to present a similarly worded resolution to the B.C. Legislature at the earliest possible date, following next Thursday's opening in an effort to have the whole question of co-operation discussed in the house.

Last year, the hearing was

Study Request News To Williston

If the B.C. government received a copy of a Washington state resolution last year asking for the co-operation of the province and its municipalities in a joint pollution study, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston has never seen it.

That's what Willison said Thursday night when asked to comment on the resolution, mentioned earlier in the day in Olympia, Wash., during a hearing of a Washington state legislative committee studying pollution problems.

The resoluion was said to have been forwarded to Premier Bennett's office.

Williston said any communication from the Washington state committee seeking co-operation would normally be forwarded from the premier's office to his department and "to my knowledge, we have had no such request."

Bennett is away on holiday.

Asked to comment on a proposal from the same Washington state committee that joint pollution hearings be held in B.C. later this year, Williston said: "I don't suppose there would be anything wrong with them if they had a purpose."

Regarding the possibility of any effects of Greater Victoria outfalls on Olympic peninsula beaches, he said the province has been closely monitoring the new outfall system and has found "there's nothing to measure."

"How anything could possibly be found on Washington beaches, I haven't a clue," he said.

Noting the hearing took place while NDP members were present, Williston said, "It sounds like they've been guided in this statement."

Benson Aide, Statistics Differ

● Benson says living-cost rise nothing to worry about, Page 9

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson was ready to paint a rosy picture of Canada's economic outlook Thursday. Statistics Canada wasn't.

In a speech to the Truck Loggers' Association convention, Pat Mahoney said the economy made strong progress in 1971 despite a faltering U.S. economy and will get a dramatic boost this year as the U.S. economy recovers.

One of the economic indicators he mentioned was the index of industrial production — which measures the output of the manufacturing and mining industries and power utilities.

The industrial production index, he said, showed significant gains in October.

Statistics Canada, however, reported earlier Thursday that the index declined to 181.1 in November from 181.7 in October. The index was adjusted to remove normal seasonal variations and reflect the real trend in industrial production.

"The manufacturing industries have been doing particularly well," Mahoney said.

Statistics Canada reported that the November decline in the index was wholly attributable to a decline in manufacturing production.

"Strong gains have been recorded in recent months, notably in durables manufacturing production such as wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment," Mahoney said.

Statistics Canada reported that the biggest November declines in manufacturing production were in those industries — wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment.

Mahoney also expressed concern at what he termed "the possibility of a renewed inflation."

Statistics Canada reported earlier Thursday that the consumer price index had recorded its largest November-to-December jump in a decade and consumer prices now are 36.3 per cent above 1961 levels.

Mahoney, apparently referring to possible large wage-increase requests, warned the association that "if big cost increases are granted Canada's capacity to export and stay competitive will be threatened."

He made no specific appeal for companies to hold prices down.

In beginning his review of the economic outlook, he noted that "as a politician on the government side you would hardly expect me to say anything other than that the economy is doing well."

U.S. Halts Huge Haul

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. customs commission Friday reported the seizure of 1,330 pounds of hashish worth almost $2 million — largest shipment in its history — at Portland, Ore.

A commission spokesman said a 1971 model Volkswagen pickup had been shipped from Los Angeles to Karachi, Pakistan, last June, and had been en route to Vancouver, B.C. by way of the United States, when it was seized. The hashish was to be sold eventually in the U.S.

Police Fire On Blacks In Rhodesia

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian police opened fire on African workers at a mine about 200 miles southwest of Salisbury Wednesday night, killing one African and wounding nine others.

The government Thursday accused African nationalists of using intimidation tactics in an attempt to impress visiting members of a special commission charged with judging whether Rhodesia's population approves terms of a settlement with Britain on Rhodesian independence.

Warmth-Born Tornado Kills Four in Trailers

FT. RUCKER, Ala. (UPI) — A tornado spawned in spring-like weather ripped through this army base and two nearby trailer parks Thursday, killing four persons and injuring about 80 others.

At least 50 trailers were destroyed and 50 others were heavily damaged. Cars, boats, power lines and trees were stacked in piles of rubble. About 100 families were homeless.

Dozens of other tornadoes were spotted through the southern United States.

Gov. George Wallace returned to Alabama from Florida, where he entered the Democratic presidential primary, and toured the Ft. Rucker area. "It is tragic to see the destruction and to see so many lives lost and people injured," he said. "However, after seeing the destruction, I don't see what kept it from being many more."

Several army helicopters, each worth half a million dollars, were destroyed at Ft. Rucker and eight others were damaged. Two hangars were destroyed.

Other less severe twisters swept into Georgia from Alabama, touching down in an area bounded by Bainbridge in southwest Georgia, Juniper in the north and Dublin in the east.

Epitaph Collector Lacks Epitaph

He Left No Stone...

OTTAWA (CP) — Wilson Arthur Stewart, who spent the last 18 years of his life crossing the country recording tombstone epitaphs, has to wait for one of his own.

His death Oct. 10 in the National Defence Medical Centre here went almost unnoticed. Then aged 53, he had a long way to go in his efforts to record the inscriptions on each of Canada's 25 million grave markers. Only about 2 per cent were preserved in his files.

He was founder and sole administrator of the Limestone Cemetery and Genealogical Society, and just before his death he was planning a national convention of genealogists and graveyard enthusiasts.

Stewart's place of birth is not contained in his file kept by the department of veterans' affairs. During his years of headstone study he lived in Kingston, Ont., Edmonton and Ottawa.

He is buried in the soldiers' plot at Ottawa's Beechwood Cemetery, where the uniform headstones are ordered in batches of 50. Until his row is filled during the next few months, Stewart's own resting spot will go unmarked.

His only epitaph will be name, age and former rank of gunner in the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Italians Bottled Up

Nature Springs Rude Surprise

ROME (UPI)—Italians by the millions scorn local water supplies and turn to the expensive bottled variety because they believe it is healthy, or they did, until this week.

A television consumer report program sent sample bottles of one of the most popular mineral waters in the Rome region to the city health department laboratory for analysis of the health-promoting minerals the water supposedly contained.

The laboratory reported that among the many chemicals in the gaseous water were traces of ammonia and nitrates—enough to make the water unsafe for drinking. The health department warned against buying it.

The Rome investigation followed one by carabinieri (national police) who said four mineral springs near Genoa, Rome and Caserta produced undrinkable water. They confiscated 100,000 bottles of the suspected water.

Anderson Denies Tanker Run 'Irrevocable'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Pollution battler David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Thursday that any belief an "irrevocable" decision has been made to bring Alaskan oil to Washington state refineries through Juan de Fuca Strait is "false, misleading and irresponsible."

In a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., Anderson said Washington state legislators were "naive and gullible" if they thought such a decision can be made, while the Alaska oil issue was still subject to court battles in the U.S. capital.

Reports that establishment of the oil-tanker route from Alaska to Washington state refineries via the Strait of Juan de Fuca was a fait accompli originated in Olympia, Wash. Wednesday with Republican Representative Harold Wolf.

Wolf told a joint press conference of state legislators and visiting New Democratic Party MLA's from B.C. that a new oil refinery at Cherry Point near Bellingham was in operation as of this week.

He also disclosed that Atlantic Richfield, which operates the refinery, is building three new supertankers to transport oil from Alaska to

Tower Men Return In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Control tower technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports, who walked off their jobs Thursday, returned to work at 1 a.m. today after a 24-hour study session.

Their colleagues who followed by walking out Thursday across Canada to Vancouver, are still in study sessions, however. But Pat Bay officials said late Thursday all flights were operating normally and the three technicians were on the job.

Low Zoning Sought

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Claims that highrise apartments can be esthetically acceptable and are an economic fact of life in urban areas don't impress one Victoria developer.

Current adverse public reaction to highrises was one of the considerations that led West Bay investments Ltd. to forego its right to build a highrise structure adjacent and south of the Princess Patricia apartment building beside Esquimalt Road in Victoria West.

The other — "the main consideration," according to a company spokesman — was that a lowrise structure costs less on a per-suite basis than a highrise.

For these two reasons, West Bay Investments, which is a subsidiary of Slegg Brothers Realty, has asked Victoria city council to rezone the property from its present highrise category to a lowrise classification.

The property at Maitland, between Esquimalt Road and Seaforth, was originally to accommodate a twin-tower to the Princess Patricia, which was also built by Slegg, but sold two years ago through a Vancouver realty firm to an undisclosed buyer for $2.75 million.

Slegg Brothers, however, retained ownership of the adjacent site and it was considered just a matter of time until the second highrise tower was built.

City hall sources said West Bay is the first developer in Victoria to ask for rezoning from highrise to lowrise. Usually, battles are fought over attempts to rezone the other way.

Bob Martman, president of Slegg Brothers Realty, said Wednesday his company's main consideration in asking for the rezoning had been one of economics.

"It is much more economical to build a three-storey apartment than a highrise; the cost per suite is much lower, but the rents are about equal," Martman explained.

"The public mood regarding highrises is also a bit sensitive these days," he said.

Provided city hall approves the rezoning request — "and there's no reason why it wouldn't" said Martman — construction will begin in March.

Help Keep Children Warm

DUNCAN — Those old sweaters and winter clothes hanging in the deep recesses of your closet could mean the difference between comfort and cold for underprivileged youngsters in northern India and Korea.

Art Mann, a druggist and Duncan resident, is the local contact for the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada, a non-denominational, non-political and non-racial organization dedicated to providing the necessities of life to underprivileged countries throughout the world.

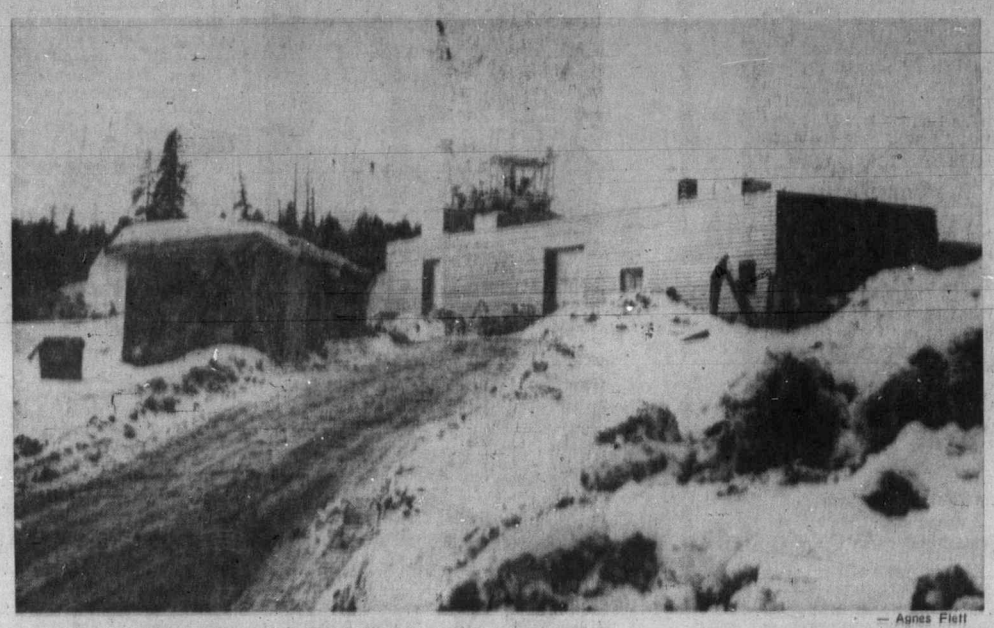

The clothing campaign was spearheaded by Dr. Lotta Hitchmanova, executive director for the USC, during her most recent visit to Duncan Nov. 29. That visit was part of an annual three-month cross-Canada tour made by Hitchmanova to raise funds and supplies.

The present drive, however, is not for money.

As Mann explained: "There is a need for warm clothing for the people of all ages in northern India and Korea. Dr. Hitchmanova showed us pictures of clothing collected from such drives being distributed to children wearing clothing that had more holes than material, in bitterly cold climates."

"Dr. Hitchmanova has established a sort of united appeal in these countries and in three to four years they should be self-sufficient as far as money goes. The need for clothing, however, will be there for a long time yet."

Anyone wishing to donate clothing to the Unitarian fund can leave it at Mann's drug store on Craig Street, Duncan. He will then package and deliver it to Victoria, where it is sorted before being distributed to the various countries involved in the program.

B.C. Views Education As Liability—Teachers

NANAIMO — The Nanaimo District Teachers' Association has expressed concern to MLA Frank Ney that educational finance is seen as a tax burden and economic liability rather than an investment in the future.

NDTA president Frank Sloat led a delegation of teachers to see Ney last week and discuss the most recent budget limitations imposed by the department of education on some school districts.

Sloat pointed out that the 108 per cent budget limitation applies to 35 school boards that have 85 per cent of the school population of the province.

Only districts with an annual budget exceeding $3 million are affected by this ceiling.

The metropolitan areas affected are the ones that are growing and the ones that need the most help, Sloat said.

He pointed to the trend in North American society for populations to move from rural to urban situations.

Every informed and intelligent person knows that modern society must depend more and more on its educational institutions for stability and social control, and that our public school systems need more public investment, not less, he said.

"It is not possible for teachers to believe that the problems of unemployment, increasing welfare costs, poverty, school drop outs, alcoholism, drug abuse, alienation and violence can be solved by restricting and reducing educational budgets."

Five things will help to solve these problems, the delegation said.

- More, not less, highly trained and competent teachers and counsellors for schools.
- Smaller, not larger, classes for children.
- More, not less, sophisticated instructional material.
- Expanded, not curtailed curricula.
- Better provisions need to be made for teachers to receive continually more in-service training.

Having instructional unit grants set at $15,190, Sloat said, means that districts are inclined to hire less qualified teachers so they can obtain at least some educational materials.

Greatly simplified, it means that the board could hire a teacher with a masters degree for $15,000 and give the teacher nothing to work with, or the district could hire a person with a two-year teaching licence for about $6,000 and provide the materials.

The quality of education suffers, Sloat said.

NDTA executive member Les Dickason outlined the cuts that have been necessary in Nanaimo school district because of budget restrictions set by the province.

These have included reduction of library service to elementary schools, reduction of in-service training for teachers, and a revision upward of the teacher pupil ratio.

The NDTA members pointed out to Ney that the limitations have only occurred in the parts of the budget affecting education directly and not in the part that deals with debenture sales, other financial complexities and cafeteria operation for example.

NDTA agreements chairman Glen Plueckhahn said the method of calculating the approved budget discriminates against expanding districts such as Nanaimo because the 1972 budget is calculated on October, 1971, enrolment. It does not account for the addition of an expected increase of 300 students in September, 1972.

It also has the effect of forcing districts to shop around for less qualified teachers because of their lower salaries.

Another result, he said, is an increase in the number of students per teacher, while at the same time a reduction in resources and materials available to the student if well qualified and experienced teachers are hired.

These things cause an erosion in the educational climate in the classroom, Plueckhahn said.

Sloat stressed that the meeting with Ney was strictly non-political and geared to inform him of the situation in Nanaimo schools when educational issues come up for a vote in the legislature this year.

Island Churchman Dedicated Worker

Funeral services will be held Friday in St. Columba Anglican Church, Tofino, for Rev. John Leighton who died Tuesday aged 85.

The Anglican clergyman first went to Tofino in 1930 where he served for five years before becoming chaplain to the Missions to Seamen in Vancouver.

He returned to the West Coast of Vancouver Island in 1954 to join the West Coast Mission where he served until his retirement in 1962.

Even after retirement he was involved with the coast communities and with the church.

Leighton was born in Bristol, England and was ordained in 1913. He was chaplain to the armed forces in the First World War and joined St. Matthias Church, Worchester, at the end of the war.

He came to Victoria in 1926 and was vicar at St. Alban's until he went to Tofino.

An early scouter, he followed up his interest in the Boy Scout movement during his various charges.

He has been described as an outgoing, warm-hearted person who could meet all types of people "and accept them where they were."

But he was more at home with seamen than he was at tea parties, according to one informant.

In the early days on the coast he used to walk between Tofino and Ucluelet, sleeping on the beach at night.

In 1967 he was awarded a Centennial medal for outstanding service to the community.

His wife died in the influenza epidemic at the end of the First World War and he never remarried. He had a brother, Percival, known as Pug, who practised law in Duncan. Another brother, Arthur, was a lawyer in Nanaimo. Both are dead.

His sister, Hilda Leighton, was active in work with the Women's Institute in its early days and was one of the founders of the Girl Guides in Victoria.

She and her parents are buried in St. Luke's churchyard, Cedar Hill and Cedar Hill Crossroad.

After his retirement from the ministry, Leighton moved into an apartment in the Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Tofino of which branch he was an active member.

He became ill while on a visit to England last year and returned as a patient in Shaughnessy Hospital, Vancouver. He had gone back to the West Coast and was a patient in hospital there when he died.

He is survived by a nephew, John Leighton, in Victoria, a niece, Margaret, in Vancouver, and a nephew, Charles, in Ottawa.

North Cowichan's Southend

Recreation Split Hurts

NORTH COWICHAN — The split in recreation here is detrimenal for residents in the Southend of North Cowichan, Colin Cameron said Tuesday.

He referred to the special recreation area for the northern part which was formed several years ago after the defeat of a recreation bylaw. The special recreation area finally enabled residents in the northern portion of the municipality to go ahead with the building of the ice skating arena at Fuller Lake.

Cameron made the comments before resigning as chairman and member of the North Cowichan Recreation Commission next Monday.

He has been a commission member for four years and for the past two years he served as chairman.

Cameron said: "I have found it very gratifying to work on the commission and I am very happy that I could work together with many different groups.

"The only distressing thing I experienced in the four and a half years was the lack of cohesion in the community that retards the development of recreational facilities. There is a need for more facilities than we have now and probably all the sports groups would like to see better facilities.

"I think this area is big enough that some of these facilities can be built with tax dollars rather than rely on the good work of the service clubs."

Cameron pointed out that most people when speaking of recreation inevitably think of a swimming pool.

He said: "But what many people do not realize, particularly in our area, is that our recreation commission covers a very large district. The commission also has to concern itself with the maintenance of existing recreational facilities as well as to create new ones."

He explained that during the past several years many improvements have been made to a number of playing fields and beaches throughout the north Cowichan municipality.

Cameron estimated that beside the regular large work load he attended about 150 regular and special meetings during his four and a half years on the commision. He said "that is a very conservative figure."

Douglas Speaks At Burns Night

PARKSVILLE — The anniversary of the birth of Robert Burns will be celebrated at the Island Hall Hotel Friday, Jan. 21.

Tommy C. Douglas (MP Cowichan and the Islands), will give the tribute to the Immortal Memory at the traditional Scottish dinner.

Teachers Get Pay Increase

DUNCAN — Cowichan teachers have been granted an increase of 8.15 per cent in their salary by a three-man salary arbitration board.

The board had held the arbitration hearing Dec. 21, and representatives of both the teachers and the board had presented their views.

Members of the arbitration board were chairman George Cumming, Gordon Cameron, and Dr. Parzival Copes. They were asked to make an award on two issues.

- Revision of the basic salary schedule.
- Revision of the special salary allowances.

Journalism Course Started

NANAIMO — Malaspina College's first journalism course has begun with Alberni Valley Times managing editor Rollie Rose as instructor.

Classes are held between 6:30 and 9:30 each Tuesday evening.

Rose began his newspaper career as a sportswriter on the New Westminster Columbian.

During his years as editor of the weekly Upper Islander in Campbell River, the paper won eight national newspaper awards.

School Built For Boys Opens Door To Girls

MILL BAY — Brentwood College started as a school for boys in 1923, will open its doors to girl students next fall, headmaster David Mackenzie said Thursday.

The school, will convert one of its buildings to provide accommodation for the girl students accepted into Grades 11 and 12 at the school next September.

Only a limited number will be allowed to enroll, said Mackenzie, and the number of students in the school will remain at the present figure of 250.

Mackenzie said that the decision to include girls was made as a result of an extensive survey of similar schools, and that one of the main reasons for starting a co-educational program was the belief that it would encourage academic competition.

Cowichan Crisis Centre Set for Spring Opening

DUNCAN — The Cowichan Crisis Centre will probably be ready for operation early this spring.

It will consist of two telephones manned by trained volunteers 24 hours a day to deal with emergencies.

President of the Cowichan Crisis Centre Society Steve Carreck told about 85 people, who attended an information meeting Thursday night at the Margaret Moss Health Centre, his society's objective is to assist people in times of serious personal distress.

Emergencies the volunteers at the other end of the crisis line will have to deal with will include suicides, drug abuse and general depressions.

Carreck said the volunteers here wil be trained in an intensive two-day, weekend course next month by volunteers of the Nanaimo Crisis Centre.

He said to get the local centre off the ground as soon as possible, volunteers and money are urgently needed. Although facilities are available, better quarters for the centre would be desirable, the president explained.

Carreck pointed out 40 volunteers are needed to handle the emergency service but the ideal situation would be a volunteer staff of between 60 and 80 people.

It is hoped that a local service club will help the organization financially. Eventually, after being established, the society will become eligible for provincial and federal grants.

During the first month the operation of the centre will cost $360 including the installation of the phones and after that it will cost $200 per month, which will pay for utilities and long distance charges from Lake Cowichan.

Carreck said at Nanaimo the crisis centre was established more than a year ago and has proved to be highly successful.

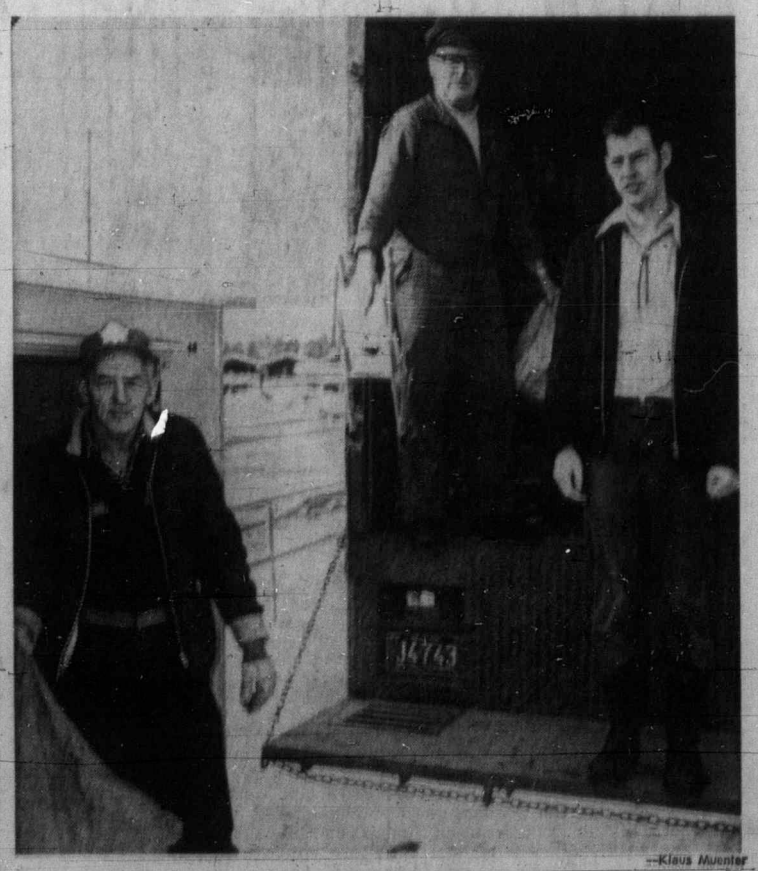

The society's public relations officer June Yelland stated that the Vancouver Crisis Centre, for instance, is dealing with about 3,000 calls a month from all age groups of society.

The Cowichan centre has the blessing of the Cowichan branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association and the Cowichan Family Counselling Service also expressed great interest.

Inquest Postponed

DUNCAN — The inquest of James Murray, 69, of Ladysmith has been postponed until Feb. 9 by Cornorer Thomas Lines.

Murray was killed when the car he was driving plunged over a railing of a bridge on Herd Road into approximately four feet of water. The inquest was postponed as one of the witnesses was unable to appear at the scheduled time Wednesday night.

'Logs More Important Than Human Life'

David Burton, a faller since 1949, told British Columbia Supreme Court Wednesday that production of logs at MacMillan Bloedel's Franklin River division is "more important than human life."

Burton was testifying before Mr. Justice E. E. Hinkson in MacMillan Bloedel's application for an injunction to stop what it claims is an illegal concerted move by fallers and buckers at Franklin River to force talks on a part of its current labor agreement.

The company alleges that efforts to reopen an existing contract before it has expired, along with a series of work stoppages, are illegal.

Burton said the source of the problem was the company's refusal to refine the wording of its formula for payment of fallers, which has been in existence for almost 20 years, to meet the additional work load of the fallers under new falling procedures.

He said the company had made new rules for falling, bucking and topping trees which, if followed by the fallers, would result in them earning less money and not more.

The new work rules impose methods on the fallers which, in the interests of safety, should be left up to the fallers to decide, he said.

For example, Burton said, a member of management decides each day if weather conditions are safe for falling — a decision which should be left to the fallers.

Working for Goodwill

Every Thursday a Goodwill Enterprises truck arrives at Duncan from Nanaimo to collect donated material from four large deposit boxes. Driver of truck Bernard Manning of Nanaimo (wearing cap) said: "We have a very good response from the general public." After finishing their job at Duncan and surrounding communities Manning and his regular helper Ronald Graham (left) also from Nanaimo, travel to the headquarters at Victoria. Pick-up area reaches from Qualicum to the Cowichan Valley. Northern part of the Island is covered by another driver stationed at Courtenay. While picking up materials at Duncan, Nanaimo men are helped by Marcus Potts (right) janitor for the Goodwill Enterprises store at Duncan.

Smallwood makes announcement — CP

Joey's Liberals Quit Next Week

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Premier Joseph Smallwood's Liberal government will resign Monday or Tuesday to make way for Newfoundland's first Progressive Conservative administration since Confederation in 1949.

The 71-year-old premier, his voice slightly hoarse, announced the decision Thursday at a news conference in the cabinet room of the Confederation Building here.

The resignation comes more than two months after the Oct. 28 provincial election which saw the Conservatives under Frank Moores win 21 seats, the Liberals 20 and Tom Burgess, New Labrador Party leader returned in Labrador West.

Moores told a later news conference he was sorry Smallwood was not planning to meet him to discuss the changeover, but he paid tribute to the premier, who has said he plans to retire from politics Feb. 7.

Moores said forming a new government would not be an easy task and he hoped for co-operation from Liberal members of the 42-seat legislature.

"In the legislature, the Liberal opposition will offer the most sincere co-operation," Smallwood said after reading a prepared statement announcing the resignation.

"There will be an absence of obstructionism, an absence of filibustering."

Smallwood said the cabinet and the caucus had reaffirmed his promise of co-operation at meetings that preceded the announcement.

The government's resignation was brought about by a ruling of the Newfoundland Supreme Court Tuesday.

Two judges turned down a Liberal petition asking that the election of a Conservative in St. Barbe South riding be set aside on grounds that a recount could not be completed because 105 ballots were accidently burned.

The judges were unanimous

State Pollution Probers Seek Hearings in B.C.

By IAN STREET
Colonist Legislature Reporter

● Olympia official calls for higher gas exports to U.S. Page 7

OLYMPIA, Wash — A Washington state legislative committee which is studying pollution problems along the international boundary wants to hold hearings in B.C. later this year.

The suggestion was made here Thursday by Thomas Swayze, speaker of the state House of Representatives, who also heads the executive committee of the state legislative council.

Swayze said his committee had taken advantage of the unique opportunity presented by the visit of the NDP caucus from B.C., to hold its first formal hearings in the course of the inquiry which will present its findings to the state legislature early in 1973.

"We hope as part of this study to come up to visit with you, and continue this very interesting dialogue," Swayze told the visitors. "We don't know what will come of the study, perhaps nothing, perhaps very little, or perhaps we'll get some kind of joint control body.

'Too Early'

It's still too early to tell."

The study will deal with a variey of mutual water and air pollution problems ranging from the effects of the Roberts Bank superport and the Cherry Point refinery on nearby areas to the effects of the discharge of raw sewage from Greater Victoria on Olympic peninsula beaches.

The resolution, approved by the House of Representatives in Olympia at its 1971 session, called for the fullest possible co-operation in the study with state departments and agencies, the provincial government in B.C., municipalities on both sides of the border and Canadian and U.S. federal authorities.

Historic

Opposition Leader Dave Barret, who heads the group of NDP house members winding up two days of meetings with state legislators here, described the hearing as an historic occasion. He said he was proud to participate in a formal way in the first joint talks between Washington and B.C. on pollution problems.

He also promised to present a similarly worded resoluion to the B.C. Legislature at the earliest possible date, following next Thursday's opening in an effort to have the whole question of co-operation discussed in the house.

Last year, the hearing was

Study Request News To Williston

If the B.C. government received a copy of a Washington state resolution last year asking for the co-operation of the province and its municipalities in a joint pollution study, B.C. Resources Minister Ray Williston has never seen it.

That's what Willison said Thursday night when asked to comment on the resolution, mentioned earlier in the day in Olympia, Wash., during a hearing of a Washington state legislative committee studying pollution problems.

The resoluion was said to have been forwarded to Premier Bennett's office.

Williston said any communication from the Washington state committee seeking co-operation would normally be forwarded from the premier's office to his department and "to my knowledge, we have had no such request."

Bennett is away on holiday.

Asked to comment on a proposal from the same Washington state committee that joint pollution hearings be held in B.C. later this year, Williston said: "I don't suppose there would be anything wrong with them if they had a purpose."

Regarding the possibility of any effects of Greater Victoria outfalls on Olympic peninsula beaches, he said the province has been closely monitoring the new outfall system and has found "there's nothing to measure."

"How anything could possibly be found on Washington beaches, I haven't a clue," he said.

Noting the hearing took place while NDP members were present, Williston said, "It sounds like they've been guided in this statement."

Benson Aide, Statistics Differ

● Benson says living-cost rise nothing to worry about. Page 9

VANCOUVER (CP) — The parliamentary secretary to Finance Minister E. J. Benson was ready to paint a rosy picture of Canada's economic outlook Thursday. Statistics Canada wasn't.

In a speech to the Truck Loggers' Association convention, Pat Mahoney said the economy made strong progress in 1971 despite a faltering U.S. economy and will get a dramatic boost this year as the U.S. economy recovers.

One of the economic indicators he mentioned was the index of industrial production — which measures the output of the manufacturing and mining industries and power utilities.

The industrial production index, he said, showed significant gains in October.

Statistics Canada, however, reported earlier Thursday that the index declined to 181.1 in November from 181.7 in October. The index was adjusted to remove normal seasonal variations and reflect the real trend in industrial production.

"The manufacturing industries have been doing particularly well," Mahoney said.

Statistics Canada reported that the November decline in the index was wholly attributable to a decline in manufacturing production.

"Strong gains have been recorded in recent months, notably in durables manufacturing production such as wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment," Mahoney said.

Statistics Canada reported that the biggest November declines in manufacturing production were in these industries — wood products, primary metals, fabricated metals and transportation equipment.

Mahoney also expressed concern at what he termed "the possibility of a renewed inflation."

Statistics Canada reported earlier Thursday that the consumer price index had recorded its largest November-to-December jump in a decade and consumer prices now are 36.3 per cent above 1961 levels.

Mahoney, apparently referring to possible large wage-increase requests, warned the association that "if big cost increases are granted Canada's capacity to export and stay competitive will be threatened."

He made no specific appeal for companies to hold prices down.

In beginning his review of the economic outlook, he noted that "as a politician on the government side you would hardly expect me to say anything other than that the economy is doing well."

U.S. Halts Hash Haul

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. customs commission Friday reported the seizure of 1,330 pounds of hashish worth almost $2 million — largest shipment in its history — at Portland, Ore.

A commission spokesman said a 1971 model Volkswagen pickup had been shipped from Los Angeles to Karachi, Pakistan, last June, and had been en route to Vancouver, B.C. by way of the United States, when it was seized. The hashish was to be sold eventually in the U.S.

Police Fire On Blacks In Rhodesia

SALISBURY (AP) — Rhodesian police opened fire on African workers at a mine about 200 miles southwest of Salisbury Wednesday night, killing one African and wounding nine others.

The government Thursday accused African nationalists of using intimidation tactics in an attempt to impress visiting members of a special commission charged with judging whether Rhodesia's population approves terms of a settlement with Britain on Rhodesian independence.

Warmth-Born Tornado Kills Four in Trailers

FT. RUCKER, Ala. (UPI) — A tornado spawned in spring-like weather ripped through this army base and two nearby trailer parks Thursday, killing four persons and injuring about 80 others.

At least 50 trailers were destroyed and 50 others were heavily damaged. Cars, boats, power lines and trees were stacked in piles of rubble. About 100 families were homeless.

Dozens of other tornadoes were spotted through the southern United States.

Gov. George Wallace returned to Alabama from Florida, where he entered the Democratic presidential primary, and toured the Ft. Rucker area. "It is tragic to see the destruction and to see so many lives lost and people injured," he said. "However, after seeing the destruction, I don't see what kept it from being many more."

Several army helicopters, each worth half a million dollars, were destroyed at Ft. Rucker and eight others were damaged. Two hangars were destroyed.

Other less severe twisters swept into Georgia from Alabama, touching down in an area bounded by Bainbridge in southwest Georgia, Juniper in the north and Dublin in the east.

Anderson Denies Tanker Run 'Irrevocable'

By HUBERT BEYER
Colonist Reporter

Pollution battler David Anderson, Liberal MP for Esquimalt-Saanich, said Thursday that any belief an "irrevocable" decision has been made to bring Alaskan oil to Washington state refineries through Juan de Fuca Strait is "false, misleading and irresponsible."

In a telephone interview from Washington, D.C., Anderson said Washington state legislators were "naive and gullible" if they thought such a decision can be made, while the Alaska oil issue was still subject to court battles in the U.S. capital.

Reports that establishment of the oil-tanker route from Alaska to Washington state refineries via the Strait of Juan de Fuca was a fait accompli originated in Olympia, Wash. Wednesday with Republican Representative Harold Wolf.

Wolf told a joint press conference of state legislators and visiting New Democratic Party MLA's from B.C. that a new oil refinery at Cherry Point near Bellingham was in operation as of this week.

He also disclosed that Atlantic Richfield, which operates the refinery, is building three new supertankers to transport oil from Alaska to

Italians Bottled Up

Nature Springs Rude Surprise

ROME (UPI)—Italians by the millions scorn local water supplies and turn to the expensive bottled variety because they believe it is healthy, or they did, until this week.

A television consumer report program sent sample bottles of one of the most popular mineral waters in the Rome region to the city health department laboratory for analysis of the health-promoting minerals the water supposedly contained.

The laboratory reported that among the many chemicals in the gaseous water were traces of ammonia and nitrates—enough to make the water unsafe for drinking. The health department warned against buying it.

The Rome investigation followed one by carabinieri (national police) who said four mineral springs near Genoa, Rome and Caserta produced undrinkable water. They confiscated 100,000 bottles of the suspected water.

Tower Men Return In Montreal

MONTREAL (CP) — Control tower technicians at Montreal International and nearby St. Hubert airports, who walked off their jobs Thursday, returned to work at 1 a.m. today after a 24-hour study session.

Their colleagues who followed by walking out Thursday across Canada to Vancouver, are still in study sessions, however. But Pat Bay officials said late Thursday all flights were operating normally and the three technicians were on the job.

Epitaph Collector Lacks Epitaph

He Left No Stone...

OTTAWA (CP) — Wilson Arthur Stewart, who spent the last 18 years of his life crossing the country recording tombstone epitaphs, has to wait for one of his own.

His death Oct. 10 in the National Defence Medical Centre here went almost unnoticed. Then aged 53, he had a long way to go in his efforts to record the inscriptions on each of Canada's 25 million grave markers. Only about 2 per cent were preserved in his files.

He was founder and sole administrator of the Limestone Cemetery and Genealogical Society, and just before his death he was planning a national convention of genealogists and graveyard enthusiasts.

Stewart's place of birth is not contained in his file kept by the department of veterans' affairs. During his years of headstone study he lived in Kingston, Ont., Edmonton and Ottawa.

He is buried in the soldiers' plot at Ottawa's Beechwood Cemetery, where the uniform headstones are ordered in batches of 50. Until his row is filled during the next few months, Stewart's own resting spot will go unmarked.

His only epitaph will be name, age and former rank of gunner in the Royal Canadian Artillery.

Port Alberni Wants Unit

Mental Health Survey Probes Island Need

PORT ALBERNI — Newly elected alderman Dr. Harry Webster told city council Monday he had talked to the deputy minister of health and that a survey will soon be completed of those areas which are in need of mental health facilities.

At that time, Webster said, it will be known whether or not Port Alberni is on the list.

The local mental health association has recently been publishing advertisements in the local paper which citizens can cut out and fill in and submit to the minister of health, urging the establishment of facilities here.

Members of the medical association and various social action groups have long pressed for a mental health unit to be set up in this area since appointments with Nanaimo psychiatrists are running months behind.

A visiting psychiatrist who used to serve the Port Alberni area on a regular basis has recently discontinued his practice here.

Webster also raised the matter of the failure of the CPR to go ahead with their share of signal lights which were to have been installed at level crossings on Roger Street and on Lathom Rd. following serious accidents at both locations.

Webster pointed out that the city has done its share, with the installation of conduit for the signals but the CPR he said is "dragging its heels" in fulfilling its side of the agreement.

Council agreed to his suggestion that a letter be written at once to CPR officials reminding them of their obligation.

Webster also noted a number of malicious fire and ambulance false alarms on the fire chief's report. He suggested that the penalties for such misdemeanors should be well publicized and be strictly enforced.

Ald. George McKnight suggested congratulations were in order for local RCMP officers who conducted such a successful program for public safety over the festive season.

"It was an excellent performance, we should offer congratulations" the alderman said, adding that it was impossible to tell how many serious accidents were avoided over the holidays because of the well-publicized program which left many people much more safety-conscious.

Council referred to the finance committee a request from the St. John Ambulance Society for a donation to assist in operating costs of the first aid group. The letter pointed out that the association has provided voluntary first aid coverage for such things as the fall fair, the annual Halloween party, motorcycle scrambles and various other public events and has had to depend on its own members and donations from those it helps for funds.

Additional funds are required by the association for much needed equipment and training facilities the letter

Duncan Escapes Major Fires

DUNCAN — The city escaped major fires last year according to fire chief Vern Jones of the Duncan volunteer fire department.

In his annual report Jones said fire losses compared favorably now with the national average. He said it is hoped that through meetings with council committee problems of fire protection costs versus fire losses might be resolved to insure a progressive and healthy economy for Duncan in the future.

The estimated fire loss was $25,150 — about half of the $58,500 lost through fire in 1970.

"The fire service over the past few years has come to realize that we are facing a very serious problem with fire losses in dollars increasing sharply. Ten per cent of the fire calls account for 90 per cent of the fire loss dollars. In 1950 there were 6,000 fire calls in the province which increased to 7,500 in 1970 or a 20 per cent increase.

"The loss in B.C. in 1950 amounted to $7 million and the loss last year jumped to $26 million which is a 400 per cent increase."

The Duncan fire brigade consists of seven officers, 17 firemen and six probationary firemen. Jones said during 1971 there were a total of 35 fire calls including 20 chimney, car, grass and other minor fires, six residential, four commercial fires and five false alarms.
